

107 HIGH STREET

On December 1849, the widow and heirs of Governor Goldsborough presented this lot to the Vestry of Great Choptank Parish upon condition that they erect a parsonage or rectory upon it. The present house was soon built as the rectory for Christ Church. It is a fairly plain, but attractive example of late Federal architecture, consisting of a two and one-half story brick wing and smaller two story frame wing to the south of this, each covered with a gabled roof. In front of the entrance is a gabled portico supported by two rectangular columns.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (if known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This house, which serves as the rectory for Christ Church, consists of a two and one half story brick portion and a smaller frame wing to the south of this, each covered by a gable roof. The brick wing is three bays long with six over six sash windows that are very close together. The front entrance is covered by a gabled portico with a plain pediment, supported by two rectangular columns on the front. There is a large hip roofed dormer on the front of the house with three small windows. This dormer was apparently added in the early 20th century or late 19th century. The frame wing is two bays long. A later wing has been added to the rear of the house.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

History:

In December 1849, the widow and heirs of Governor Goldsborough presented this lot to the Vestry of Great Choptank Parish upon condition that they erect a parsonage or rectory upon it. The rectory was immediately built and was rented by the vestry until paid for in 1858. Rev. Theodore Barber, rector of the church, took possession at that time and lived there until his death in 1892.

Significance:

This is a fairly plain, but attractive and well maintained example of late Federal style architecture. It contributes to the historic character of High Street, which is the oldest street in Cambridge and consists of many large homes of architectural interest.

107 HIGH STREET
CAMBRIDGE, MARYLAND

FJH 1/368/ 371, 373

In July 1849, the heirs of Governor Charles Goldsborough (see 200 High Street) offered to donate this land to Great Choptank Parish if the church would build a rectory within two years. The parish accepted the offer and constructed the main part of this residence in the last half of 1849. The house has served since that time as a rectory for Christ Church. In 1874, the front portico was added and the building has been enlarged over the years. It is a fairly plain but attractive and well-maintained example of the late Federal style of architecture. It contributes to the historical and architectural character of High Street, which contains several houses from the eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries.
