DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (if known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE
At the upper reaches of Hudson Creek stands Indian Quarter. It is a unique, one story, frame structure faced with brick. In some respects it resembles Scotch-town, a Virginia house dating 150 years before. Indian Quarter was constructed in 1908 as a summer residence which is the reason for its unusual proportions. It has a central door with sidelights. On the east side are five windows and on the west side are three, though the space is about equal. At the gables there are two windows, all of which have 1/1 sash. Two small chimneys pierce the "A" roof about 12 feet in from the gables. A ridge in the roof above the entrance indicates there was formerly a gable or entrance porch. On the west end is a small leanto and on the south a porch the length of the building.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Indian Quarter is a unique structure in the area and is worthy for inclusion in the survey as a form of building which was being constructed as a second house (or vacation house) in a period when only the wealthy could afford such a luxury.

The land on which the house stands was patented in 1669 as Indian Quarter. Later it was called Thomas' Choice. A graveyard on the property bears the stones of members of the Thomas family.
