The rural agrarian and timber related economy that developed across the river drainages of Blackwater River and the tributaries of the Little Choptank River sponsored the growth of distinct white and black residential communities, each with their own places of worship dating to the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries. Along rural White Marsh Road, north of the channeled section of Stewart’s Canal labeled Coursey’s Creek on the 1877 Parson’s Creek election district map, an African-American community developed to include a dozen houses, a school and the Malon(e)’s Chapel. The congregation was established the year following the Civil War. On September 7, 1866, Jerry Malon and his wife Roseann conveyed a small parcel of land to trustees Jerry Malon, John Jones, Andrew Opher, Vince Green, James Keene, James Brown, and John E. Opher. One condition of the transfer was that the church was to be known as “Malon(e)’s Chapel.” Evidently the original congregation was associated with the A.M.E. conference, but in 1887, it was shifted to Methodist Episcopal denomination, and the property was conveyed between the two entities. The original chapel served the two congregations for nearly thirty years when this gable roofed frame church was erected in 1895. The church cemetery contains burials of two men who served in the Civil War. Sergeant David Kane was a member of Company K of the United States Infantry of Colored Troops, and Alfred Wheatley belonged to Company E. Some of the oldest members of the congregation buried in the cemetery are Moses Tubman (1819-1891), and his wife Emeline Tubman.

DESCRIPTION SUMMARY

Malon’s M. E. Church, also known as Malon’s Chapel, stands at 4573 White Marsh Road south of the village of Madison, in the Madison Election District of Dorchester County, Maryland. The single-story, gable roofed frame church, built in 1895, is supported by a low brick foundation, and the exterior is clad with asphalt shingles over plain weatherboards. The medium pitched roof is covered with asphalt shingles. Attached to the south side is a small wing that housed a side section for additional congregational seating. The church faces west with the gable roof oriented on an east/west axis.

The interior has been covered with sheet paneling and a drop ceiling. A raised altar is defined by a later pulpit and an original turned baluster railing. An arched opening separates the pulpit from the choir loft that is housed in a gable roofed rear apse. Also standing on the property is a single-story shed roofed frame privy dating from the early twentieth century. An adjacent cemetery contains several hundred burials, several of which are marked by Federal-issue stones of individuals who served in the United States Infantry during the Civil War.

GENERAL DESCRIPTION

Malon’s M. E. Church, standing at 4573 White Marsh Road, is a single-story late nineteenth century frame church supported on a low brick pier foundation, and the exterior is clad with asphalt shingles over plain weatherboards. The steeply pitched gable roof is covered with asphalt shingles. Attached to the front of the church is a two-level center entrance tower capped by a conical spire sheathed with wood shingles. Attached to the back of the main block is a shorter single story wing that houses the choir loft. To the south is a shorter single-story wing that houses a side section of additional sanctuary seating. Standing in the back yard in the edge of a young woodland is a single-story, shed roofed frame privy. Fixed in the northwest corner pier is a marble datestone inscribed, “Malon’s M. E. Church, 1895.”

The west (main) elevation is symmetrical façade with a center entrance tower flanked by two-over-two sash windows. The double door entrance, with replacement doors, is topped by a three-light transom. Small single pane sash windows pierce each side of the tower on the first floor. Stretching across the mid section of the tower and coordinated with the main block is a pent eave that has an open soffitt and exposed rafter ends. The wall surface of the tower above the pent eave is sheathed with asbestos shingles. Three sides of the tower are pierced by rectangular louvered vents. The tower is capped by a modified broach spire with a conical tower rising from a pyramidal base.

The north side of the church is defined by two sets of windows; a tripartite set of sash to the left of an exterior concrete block stove chimney and a paired set of windows to the right. The edge of the gable roof is finished with an extended eave and exposed rafter ends. The south side of main block is partially covered by a shorter single story side wing, that is extended on its west side by a shed roofed section. There is a tripartite set of windows that light the sanctuary to the left of the wing.
Attached to the back of the main block is a shorter single story gable roofed wing that houses the choir loft. The rear wing is very plain with small windows marking the sides. There is a side door on the north façade of the wing.

The interior has been remodeled with sheet paneling on the walls and a drop acoustical tile ceiling. The pew furniture and turned baluster altar rail date from the late nineteenth century. An arched opening behind the altar separates it from the choir loft.

The associated cemetery includes burials of two men, Sergeant David Kane and Alfred Wheatley, who fought during the Civil War. Sergeant Kane was a member of Company K, 39th U.S. Colored Infantry, and Alfred Wheatley was in Company E of the 7th U.S. Colored Infantry. Also included in the cemetery are burials for Moses Tubman (1819-1891) and his wife Emeline Tubman.

SIGNIFICANCE SUMMARY

The rural agrarian and timber related economy that developed across the river drainages of Blackwater River and Coursey Creek in central Dorchester County sponsored the growth of white and black residential communities, each with their own places of worship by the mid to late nineteenth century. Along the rural White Marsh Road south of the village of Madison, previously called Tobaccostick, an African-American congregation was established the year following the end of the Civil War. On September 7, 1866, Jerry Malon and his wife Roseann conveyed a small parcel of land to trustees, Jerry Malon, John Jones, Andrew Opher, Vince Green, James Keene, James Brown, and John E. Opher. One condition of the transfer was that the church was to be known as “Malon’s Chapel.” Evidently the original congregation was associated with the A.M.E. Conference but in 1887 it was shifted to the Methodist Episcopal denomination, and the property was conveyed between the two entities. The original building served the two congregations for nearly thirty years when this gable roofed frame church was erected in 1895.

Malone ME Church was built in 1890. The congregation dates from 1882. This church was originally supported by blacks engaged in watering. A packing plant was active at Madison (oysters, crabmeat, etc.) for over 100 years. The seafood industry is still vital to this waterfront town. There are two white Methodist churches in Madison (one abandoned), and the Malone congregation drew out of the black membership of these churches after the Civil War.
