Bramble House
East New Market
private

c. 1800

The Bramble house survives as one of a small collection of turn of the nineteenth century dwellings that date from the early years of East New Market development. Although colonial occupation of the region dates to the seventeenth century, the village of East New Market did not appear until the last years of the eighteenth century. Originally marking the northeast corner of the main intersection, the Bramble house was identified in an 1880 will as nearly one hundred years old at that time. A few years after the will was probated in Dorchester County court, the two-story frame house was relocated a short distance north. While the exterior of the Bramble house has been obscured by a layer of aluminum siding, the interior retains examples of woodwork dating from the early to mid nineteenth century. Perhaps most notable is the undisturbed raised panel doors, wrought-iron hinges, chair rail, and flooring that remains on the second floor.

Prepare both a summary paragraph and a general description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

The Bramble house stands on the east side of North Main Street in the town of East New Market, Dorchester County, Maryland. The two-story frame house, moved this site site around 1880-1890, faces west with the principal gable oriented on a north/south axis.

Built around 1800, the two-story, two-bay frame house is supported by a minimal masonry foundation and sheathed with a uniform layer of aluminum siding. The steeply pitched asphalt shingle roof is finished with a boxed cornice and flush gable ends. Attached to the back of the house is a two-story dining room/kitchen wing that was reworked and enlarged around 1972.

The west (main) facade is a two-bay elevation with the front door located in south bay and a six-over-six sash window to the north. The first floor is entirely sheltered by a screened-in porch that is covered by a hip roof. The second floor is lighted by a pair of unevenly spaced six-over-six sash windows flanked by louvered shutters.

The north gable end is marked by six-over-six sash windows that light the first and second floors, while a pair of small windows light the attic. The windows of each floor flank an interior end brick stove stack. The south gable end is less detailed with a single six-over-six sash in the west bay of the second floor and a pair of attic windows mark the upper gable. The east side of the main house is covered entirely by the two-story dining room/kitchen wing that is lighted on each floor by single six-over-six sash windows.

The first floor interior follows a side hall/parlor plan with the stair rising against the south wall. The mid nineteenth-century style stair consists of a heavily turned newel post a simply molded handrail. A raised six-panel door provides access to the space beneath the stair. The parlor is also finished with mid nineteenth-century woodwork with a standard post-and-lintel mantel fixed against the north wall. Aside from the stair closet, the first floor doors date from the middle years of the nineteenth century as well. Contrasting with the mid nineteenth-century woodwork on the first floor are exposed corner posts that retain a board covering decorated with a beaded edge.

The second floor, on the other hand, retains more turn of the nineteenth century woodwork. The second floor of the front block is divided by a plastered partition that separates the bedroom from a passage behind. Fixed in the southeast corner of the passage is the enclosed attic stair which survives with a raised six-panel door, HL hinges, and cyma curve backband surrounds. The passage and bedroom retain wide pine floors and sections of period chair rail. A two-panel Greek Revival style door opens into a rear bedroom.

Prepare both a summary paragraph of significance and a general statement of history and support.

The Bramble house survives as one of a small collection of turn of the nineteenth-century frame houses in East New Market. Originally built on the northeast corner of the main intersection of the town, the two-story frame house was relocated around 1880-1890 when the corner site became more valuable as commercial space. The house is named for Mary Bramble, a former owner who may have been connected with building the structure. The interior finishes date from two principal periods. The first floor was reworked significantly around 1850-1860, while the second floor retains more of its turn of the nineteenth-century features. The exposed corner posts are relatively rare for East New Market houses.

The attic is partially finished. Visible within the corner of the attic stair is the exposed southeast corner post with its beaded edge board sheathing. A patch in the attic flooring at the south gable end indicates the former location of the interior end brick chimney. The common rafter roof is exposed within a small peak space. The rafter pairs are fixed with a pinned lap joint as well as wrought nails.

East New Market Historic District Commission

ORGANIZATION:

Summer, 1985

DATE RECORDED:

PROPERTY OF MR. AND MRS. CHARLES F. HURLEY (BRAMBLE HOUSE 1785)

2½ story, frame structure with aluminum siding.* Cross gabled roof that does not extend to front covered with asphalt tile. Brick foundation.

Front facade has 3 bays; entrance in 3rd bay. Hip roof over veranda. Veranda is screened.

On the right side at the extreme top there are small, square, stationery 4-pane windows. 3 bays wide.

A portion of the present one-story addition (sunporch)was originally a small open porch. Flat roof.

Original shutters have been replaced with aluminum.

*According to owner, under aluminum siding there is weather boarding 4 to 6 inches wide covered with shingles.

According to owner, main block was built 1785 or before; rear block between 1840-50; sunporch 1973.

WORKSHOP OR CARRIAGE HOUSE

This outbuilding has concrete block base with wide vertical boards and 2 swinging doors. Asphalt tile roof.

*According to owner, a portion was a wood-coal shed and the hinges are original.

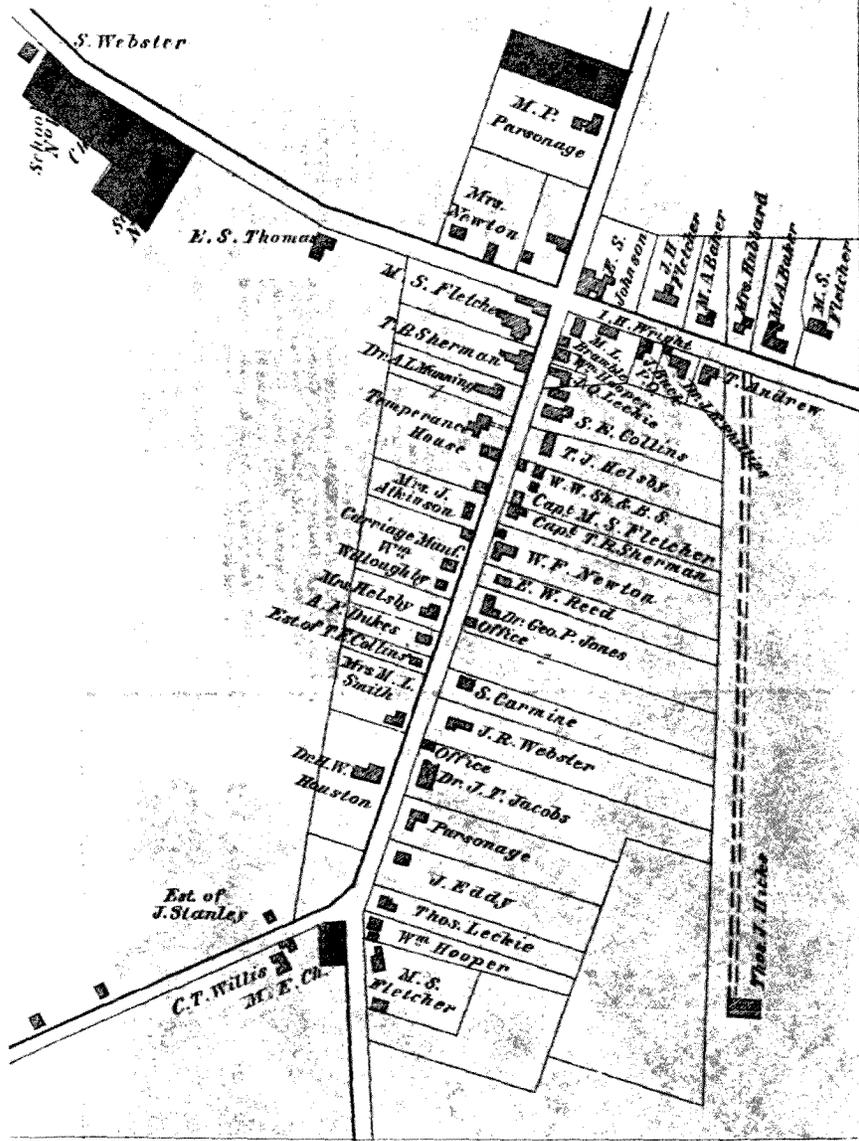

Note: From BETWEEN THE NANTICOKE AND THE CHOPTANK.

A will of 1880 refers to this house as being "nearly one hundred years old," although its present appearance is from a much later period. This two-bay-wide, two-and-one-half-story frame house originally stood at the southeast corner of the Maryland routes 16 and 14 intersection but was moved to its present location in the 1890s. Prior to this move, the Bramble House functioned as a hotel.
