N. and E. Crocheron Store
Crocheron
c. 1890

Although abandoned for at least a generation, the N. and E. Crocheron store is one of the few waterfront commercial structures standing in Dorchester County. Built with its principal façade to White Wood Cove of Tedious Creek, the two-story, gable-front frame structure was designed as a warehouse as well as a dry goods store that incorporated the post office at the turn of the twentieth century. The two-story main block is fitted with several loading doors, one of which retains a timber hoist beam on the second floor water side. The store and post office operated in the contemporaneous side shed, which is defined by the principal public entrance, also on the water side. Small three-paned barred windows light the store interior on two sides and are fixed above interior wall shelving. The enclosure for the post office is fitted with a wire grille top section.

The N. and E. Crocheron store building is located on twenty-acre property that includes a late nineteenth century house and outbuilding complex. (See D-837) The village of Crocheron developed during the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries with the boom in the oyster and seafood industry across the Chesapeake. An oyster packing house was also a fixture on White Wood Cove. The store and oyster house were part of the complex built by Nathan Crocheron (1802-1889) and his grandson, Eugene Crocheron (1857-1928), originally from New York state. Eugene married Triphina Johnson and in 1890 purchased a sizable acreage between Tedious Creek and Hooper's Straits. By 1920, Eugene Crocheron is listed in the national census as a dry goods merchant with his wife and two sons, Irving H. and Clarence E. Crocheron. Eugene Crocheron was also postmaster of the community, beginning in 1901. Following Eugene Crocheron's death in 1928, his son Clarence took on the role of postmaster until 1934, when Minnie Short Crocheron, Irving's wife, assumed the role and held it until her retirement in 1968. The Crocheron store remained in family hands until 2002.

DESCRIPTION SUMMARY

The N. and E. Crocheron Store stands at the end of a lane that intersects Crocheron Road in the watermans' community of Crocheron in the Strait Neck Election District of Dorchester County, Maryland. Oriented to face White Wood Cove of Tedious Creek, the two-story gable-front frame store building dates around 1880 and rests on a low brick foundation. The exterior is sheathed with asbestos shingles, and the steeply pitched gable roof is covered with asphalt shingles over wood shingles. The building faces southeast with the gable roof oriented on a northwest/southeast axis. Attached to the two-story main block is a contemporaneous single-story shed roofed wing. The building has been abandoned for more than a generation. It served as a waterfront store and post office for the village of Crocheron.

GENERAL DESCRIPTION

The N. and E. Crocheron Store is located on White Wood Cove of Tedious Creek in the village of Crocheron in the Straits election district of Dorchester County, Maryland. Built with an orientation to the waterfront, the two-story, rectangular frame store building is defined by a narrow three-bay gable-front façade and a longer two-bay southwest side elevation. The building is supported on a low brick foundation, and the exterior is clad with asbestos shingles. The steeply pitched gable roof is covered with asphalt shingles over wood shingles.

The southeast (main) elevation is an asymmetrical façade with the two-story, gable-front main block pierced by a center door opening and flanking window openings that are shuttered. The second story is pierced by a center freight type door with a timber hoist beam above. A second door opening is located to the east and boarded over window to the west. The gable end is pierced by a two-over-two sash window. The edge of the roof is finished with an extended eave with returns at the base.

The northwest side elevation is marked by a single-story door opening on the first story and a pair of boarded over window openings on the second. The edge of the roof is finished with a boxed cornice. A single flue brick stove chimney, now collapsed, remains centrally located on the roof.

The northeast (rear) elevation is defined by a single door opening on the ground floor fitted with Closed doors secured with a metal bar hung on a metal staple. The second story and the gable end are Defined by boarded over window openings. The edge of the roof is extended and finished with returns at the base.

The northeast side of the main block is entirely covered by shed roofed store and post office wing, which has the principal public entrance on the southeast side. Sheltered by a gable roofed porch, the entrance is fitted with double doors dating from the third quarter of the nineteenth century. The raised-panel doors have removable upper panels typical of late nineteenth century stores. There is a small shuttered window opening fixed above the porch roof. The edge of the shed roof is extended. The other two sides of the shed roofed store section are defined by highly placed three-pane windows fitted with vertical iron security bars. The high wall position allowed for uninterrupted wall space inside for store shelving.

The interior survives with shelving around the perimeter of the shed roofed section, and in the southwest corner a wired enclosure for the post office.

HISTORY AND SUPPORT

The N. and E. Crocheron store building is located on the edge of White Wood Cove of Tedious Creek, and it is part of a twenty-acre property that includes a late nineteenth-century house and outbuilding complex in the village of Crocheron. The village developed during the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries with the boom in the oyster and seafood industry across the Chesapeake. An oyster packing house was also a structure that defined the creek edge during the early to mid twentieth century.¹ The store and oyster house were part of the complex built by Nathan Crocheron (1802-1889) and his grandson Eugene Crocheron (1857-1928), who were originally from New York state. Eugene married married Triphina Johnson. By 1920, Eugene Crocheron is listed in the national census as a dry goods merchant with his wife and two sons, Irving H. and Clarence E. Crocheron. Eugene Crocheron was also postmaster of the community called Crocheron, which had developed around the family complex between 1890 and 1920. Following Eugene Crocheron's death in 1928 his son Clarence took on the role of postmaster until 1934, when Minnie Short Crocheron, Irving's wife, assumed the role and held it until her retirement in 1968. The Crocheron store remained in family ownership until 2002.²
