The classic three bay I house at 4909 Ijamsville Road (MIHP F-5-161) appears to have been constructed around 1890. The random coursed stone foundation supports the balloon frame and is capped with a moderately pitched gable roof covered with asphalt shingles and a gable end interior ridgeline chimney. The home has numerous alterations and additions. Aluminum siding and modern 1/1 light windows cover the symmetrical facade while the original window placements have been altered along the side elevations. A large full width two-story balloon framed addition (shed roof, 1/1 windows, three flush door, aluminum siding) has been placed on the rear of the home. A one-bay 1 story porch with turned posts covers the front entrance. To the rear of the home is a modern two-story concrete block house (possibly a workshop) with asymmetrical fenestration and a off-center door. The gable asphalt shingle roof is moderately pitched and has a concrete external chimney on the gable end wall. A modern aluminum storage shed is also adjacent.

Historically, the farmstead also included the property at 4830 Ijamsville Rd (MIHP F-5-160) and 4934 Ijamsville Rd (MIHP F-5-162). The farm is representative of the peak growth period of Ijamsville (1890-1910), particularly along Mussetter and Ijamsville roads. While Ijams Mill and the B&O railroad (and the slate quarries) formed the catalyst for the founding of Ijamsville by Plummer Ijams, the farmsteads in the region also prospered and contributed to the area's growth with quick access to the mill and markets. The original tracts along Ijamsville Road (from Route 144 to the B&O RR) were primarily farmsteads and the namesake for 4830 Ijamsville is derived from the original 'Good Friday tract', part of the much larger landholdings of the local Duvall family. The F-5-161 structural complex was within the c. 140-acre part of the larger Duvall family holdings that was sold in 1884 to Ellen Jane Dertzbaugh (FCLR AF9/243). In 1890 Ellen Jane Dertzbaugh divided a 4.6-acre parcel on the east side of Ijamsville Road out of the c. 140-acre tract and sold the small parcel to Charles W. Ford (FCLR WIP11/674). This parcel has remained the same size and shape since 1890, passing through 13 land transfers up to the present owners. Given the size of the lot, it is reasonable to assume that Ford purchased this land to build a residence, and the architectural evidence also points to a circa 1890 construction date.

No known significant events or people are known to be associated with the property and it is the opinion of the preparer that the property does not meet Criteria A or B of the NRHP. The property has not been evaluated under Criterion D. On account of the significant alterations and additions to the house and outbuildings, it is the opinion of the preparer that the property at 4909 Ijamsville road does not meet NRHP Criterion C. In the opinion of the preparer, the property has not met any of the criteria and is therefore not eligible for the NRHP.
