DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Boyer House is an ell shaped, two story, gable roofed, common bond house which faces northwest from the end of Main Street off Route 355 in Urbana.

It is a detached private residence, which is unrelated to other buildings on the street. The principal facade has a one step open porch with decorated frieze and is three bays in width; the main entrance door occupies the first bay from the northeast corner. It is a single six panel door with a three windowed light transom. Two windows of 6/6 sash with slip sills and louvered shutters, occupy the second and third bays. At the second floor level are similar windows with louvered shutters. The roof is tin with a plain boxed cornice and inside end chimneys which have been replaced. The foundation is of low random stone.

The south end of the house is one bay in width. There are two 6/6 sash windows at both the first and second floor levels and one small 2/2 window to the left of the center of the building.

The east side of the house is three bays in width with a two storied porch, regionally characteristic to the area. Occupying the first and second bays are two six panel doors with a 6/6 sash window with louvered shutters in the third bay. At the second floor level are two six paneled doors on the first and third bays. The roof is tin with a plain boxed cornice. On the first level on the west rear side of the house is a recent one story wood addition. Directly to the rear of the house is the ruins of a stone smoke or spring house.

BUILDER/ARCHITECT

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Boyer House, currently in the process of restoration, once played an important role in Urbana as the "Hidden Inn", a small country inn and as the doctor's office of Dr. Leonard C. Mullinex.

The front section of the house was built around 1835 after the land was acquired from the trustees of the nearby Zion Church. It is difficult to estimate the date of the rear portion of the house, since according to the current owner, the rafters were taken from another building.

The building operated as Dr. Mullinex's home and office from 1875 to around 1906. The Boyer House was used as an Inn while owned by Vandelia Cadle and Wilson Griffith in the 1930's and 1940's. At all other times the house was a private residence as it is today.
