Kenneth R. Durst House
New Germany
Private

ca. 1860-1880

Dating to the period c. 1860-80, the Kenneth R. Durst House is a two story, gable-roofed dwelling of vertical plank construction which sits on a stone foundation. Its basic configuration is a two bay by two bay rectangular plan with symmetrically spaced openings on the facade and endwalls. The stone ruins of a cave (root cellar) and a springhouse are located at the rear of the house.

The Kenneth R. Durst House is significant as an unaltered plank dwelling. Its 1833 datestone, however, does not appear to be true to the house. The style of the building, 2/2 sash windows, stove chimneys, and plank construction are elements that did not appear in the county until much later in the century.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

Dating to the period c. 1860-80, the Kenneth R. Durst House is a two story, gable-roofed dwelling of vertical plank construction which sits on a stone foundation. Its basic configuration is a two bay by two bay rectangular plan with symmetrically spaced openings on the facade and endwalls. The stone ruins of a cave (root cellar) and a springhouse are located at the rear of the house.

The facade (SE elevation) is pierced by two openings per floor, the first floor southern bay being occupied by a four-panel door with a two-pane transom. The northeast endwall has six openings: a four-panel, transom-topped door and a window on the first floor, two windows on the second floor, and two four-pane attic windows that flank an interior brick stove chimney. Two windows per floor and another similar chimney characterize the southwest endwall. A transom-topped, four panel door is the only opening on the rear elevation. All of the windows on the building have been board over, however, one of them leaves evidence that they were 2/2 sash.

The building rests on a whitewashed, coursed, roughly squared stone foundation with an 1833 datestone.* Its sills are half-lapped at the corners, and the walls are constructed of vertical pine planks covered with weatherboard siding on the exterior, and lath and plaster on the interior.

A plank partition wall with a four-panel door at its center divides the first floor into two rooms, the southern room covering roughly 2/3 of the total area. An enclosed staircase occupies the western corner of this room. One step juts out into the room, and then a ten tread, straight run rises along the northwest wall to the second floor.

The second floor has a center hall, two rooms on the northern side, and one on the southern side, all with batten doors.

*Visual inspection of the foundation revealed that the datestone was probably not originally part of this foundation, but comes from an adjacent house site. The exact date when this was inserted into the foundation is not known.
