Physical Description

The Ray E. Wilhelm Farm is an agricultural complex constructed circa 1890 in a hilly area on the southeast side of a dirt lane called Wilhelm Farm Road, east of Avilton-Lonaconing Road in Garrett County. At the time of a 1981 survey, the property consisted of a dwelling, barn, corn crib, and chicken house. As of November 2013, the barn and corn crib are no longer extant; however the dwelling and the circa-1950 concrete block chicken house remain.

Dwelling (Circa 1890)

The dwelling is a two-story wood-frame house constructed circa 1890 upon a stone foundation. The dwelling is clad in vinyl siding and capped with a cross gable roof covered with standing-seam metal and featuring cornice returns in the side gables. A two-story gable-roofed ell addition and a two-story shed roof addition are appended to the rear (east) elevation. An exterior concrete block chimney is located on the south elevation. The façade (west elevation) features a one-story porch that wraps around to the north elevation. The porch is enclosed on the façade and open on the north elevation. The porch is covered with a standing-seam metal shed roof and supported by square posts. A circa-1990 one-story gable roof addition is appended to the lower level of the north elevation. Fenestration consists of one-over-one double-hung wood sash windows, and a six-over-six double-hung vinyl sash and fixed single pane windows in the enclosed porch. Rectangular louvered vents are also located in the gables. The dwelling stands in good to fair condition.

Chicken House (Circa 1950)

A one-story concrete block chicken house is located to the south of the dwelling. The circa-1950 chicken house is capped with a flat or shed roof and stands in poor condition.

History and Significance

The first Europeans began to arrive in the area around Avilton, Maryland in the mid-eighteenth century. There is little record of those who settled in the area first, as they did not file patents or commission surveys, but built cabins and cleared small portions of land. However, after the Revolutionary War development in the area greatly expanded. The forests that covered the mountains were slowly but surely cleared. Pine forests largely made up the land between Savage and Negro Mountains, with a few other varieties like spruce and hemlock intermixed (Brown 1896:54). These large wood-covered miles attracted many hunters to the area, including Meshach Browning, who wrote a book about the many years he spent living as a pioneer in the area around Avilton and directly west. Hunters like Browning who populated the area used the National Road, which was constructed through the area in the early nineteenth century, to get their hides and meats back to eastern markets (Browning 1942:195). While the hunters settled early, it was not long before additional lots were readied for settlement. Many of the earliest lots in the area were surveyed for veterans of the Revolutionary War. Some of these lots went to men like Thomas Johnson, who eventually became Governor of Maryland. There were also land speculators who made their mark on the area, including men like Brooke Beall and William Deakins (Rowland 2009:39).

The earliest land records of the area typically consist of people with large tracts of land selling those tracts to other speculators. But, starting in the mid-1800s that began to change, as smaller portions of land were sold off, and more and more farms were raised in the valleys between the mountains. As land was freshly cleared, many farmers from east of the Appalachians began to plant tobacco. However, they learned quickly that the soil was made too poor by tobacco farming in this area (Brown 1896:300). The settlement that would later become Avilton was originally known as "The McKenzie Settlement" for the many numbers of Scottish immigrants, particularly McKenzies, who settled there. The early farmers of this area grew primarily wheat, rye, oats and potatoes. A partial listing of the founding families of this area was included in Garrett County: A History of Maryland's Tableland and includes: Garlitz, Blocher, Wilhelm, Broadwater, Miller, Crowe and Merrill among others. By 1885, the area was known as Avilton, and a post office was opened under that name (Schlosnagle 1978:65).

In the second half of the nineteenth century, railroads made their way through Garrett County, connecting the area like never before. As the railroads arrived, the many pine forests that surrounded area farms were looked at with a new sense of their value. While they had been used as a source of building materials for years, the forests were now logged and the timber was shipped to larger markets on the railroad. On Savage Mountain, it was the Juniata Lumber Company that took advantage of the fine timber of the area (Brown 1896:264,275). Increasingly, the agricultural area was dotted throughout by people who worked in the industry. As Jacob Brown described the area "she grew from a county of crude backwoods settlements and small self-sufficient farms to a county of coal towns, timber towns, resort towns, trade towns, and increasingly fertile fields and meadows (Brown 1896:304)." While the area was still largely rural, times were slowly changing.

By the first half of the twentieth century, more and more people were working both on their farms and in various industries. By the 1940 Census, many household heads were listed as working in mining or timbering, while it is also indicated that many continued to pursue agriculture (Ancestry.com). While they produced goods for local markets, the demands of an increasingly connected society drew more and more residents off their farms. The effects of the great depression were also seen in the 1940 Census of the area, with many people listed as road builders or general laborers who were employed in emergency government work (Ancestry.com). After World War II, some farms began to not be used for agriculture. This has led to the decline of some of the properties, and the destruction of others. Many families, descendants of the original settlers at McKenzie Settlement, continue to use the fields around Avilton to raise cows and some grains, continuing some of the traditions that were started so many years ago.

The Ray E. Wilhelm Farm is located on the southeast side of Wilhelm Farm Road in Lonaconing, an agricultural community in Garrett County. The property consists of a vernacular circa-1900 dwelling and a circa-1950 concrete block chicken house.

The earliest evidence of land ownership is from 1858, when Isaac Crowe purchased one-third of the interest in 170 acres of Lot 4 of the tract of land known as "Walnut Hills" from James Swan (Allegany County Deed Book 17:281) Isaac Crowe and his wife purchased an addition one-third interest in the property from Alexander and Mary Good in 1863 (Allegany County Deed Book 20:667; 23:413). Isaac Crowe, a farmer, and his wife Mary Chaney Crowe, owned the property until Mary Crowe's death in 1897 and Isaac Crowe's death in 1902 (Find a Grave 2012a; 2012b). After Isaac Crowe's death, the property passed to his children (Garrett County Deed Book 46:28). In 1903, the heirs of Isaac and Mary Crowe sold the property to Thomas Carr, who sold it to Archibald Broadwater a few months later (Garrett County Deed Book 46:28; 46:589).

Archibald Broadwater was born in Garrett County in about 1862 to John and Mary Broadwater (United States Census Bureau 1870). In 1903, Archibald's first wife, Clara Wampler Broadwater, died (Find a Grave 2012c). Soon after, Archibald purchased the 170-acre property, and in 1904, married a second wife named Margaret (Garrett County Deed Book 46:589; United States Census Bureau 1910). It is likely that Archibald Broadwater, a farmer, constructed the dwelling soon after purchasing the property and lived there with his family. After Archibald Broadwater's death in 1916, the property passed to the executor of his estate, daughter Media Broadwater Green (Garrett County Deed Book 100:437). It is likely, however, that Archibald's son Herman C. Broadwater continued to live on the property with his wife Amelia and children immediately following Archibald's death. The 1920 United States Census shows that Margaret Broadwater also lived with Herman C. Broadwater at that time (United States Census Bureau 1920). In 1923, Herman C. Broadwater, a farmer and carpenter, purchased the property from his sister Media (Garrett County Deed Book 84:503). In 1930, Herman and Amelia Broadwater sold the property to Amelia's brother, William Warne (Garrett County Deed Book 100: 437). One month later, William Warne sold the property back to Amelia Broadwater (Garrett County Deed Book 100: 459). Amelia Broadwater passed away in 1933, and by 1936, the property had foreclosed and sold to Julius and Pearl Wilhelm (Garrett County Deed Book 112: 273).

Julius O. Wilhelm was born in Garrett County on February 16, 1907 to farmer John Olin Wilhelm and his wife Ada E. Garlitz (Social Security Administration 2011). Julius, also a farmer, married Pearl Lela Crowe in about 1928 and lived with Julius's brother Leonard until purchasing the 170-acre property in 1936 (United States Census Bureau 1930). By 1940, Julius and Pearl Wilhelm were living on the property with their two daughters, Beatrice and Agnes. According to the 1940 United States Census, the farm was located on Lonaconing Road (United States Census Bureau 1940). Pearl Wilhelm died in 1964 (Cumberland Evening Times, 22 June 1964). In 1979, Julius Wilhelm sold the property to his nephew, Ray Edward Wilhelm (Garrett County Deed Book 403:266). Julius O. Wilhelm died in 1995 (Social Security Administration 2011).

The 170-acre property remained in the possession of Ray Edward Wilhelm and his wife Matilda until 2006, when they sold it to Charles and Denise Sharp (Garrett County Deed Book 1188: 563). In 2012, Charles and Denise Sharp transferred ownership of the property to their business, Sharp's Wild Horse Meadow, LLC (Garrett County Deed Book 1721: 256).

history. The property is associated with agricultural activities and served as a family farm from the early twentieth-century until the mid- to late-twentieth century, However, several contributing agricultural structures have been demolished, and the extant structures do not strongly present a cohesive reflection of the agricultural practices that took place on the property. Therefore, this resource is recommended not eligible for NRHP listing under Criterion A. The extant structures on the property are associated with the Broadwater Family, particularly Archibald Broadwater, who owned the property from 1903 until 1923, Herman Broadwater, who owned the property from 1923 until 1936, and Julius O. Wilhelm, who owned the property from 1936 until 1979. Local historical and genealogical sources do not provide any further information related to the Broadwaters, Wilhelms, or any other individuals associated with the property, and there is no evidence that any individuals associated with the property were significant in local, state, or national history. Therefore, this resource is recommended not eligible for NRHP listing under Criterion B. The dwelling stands as a common and heavily altered example of vernacular architecture in rural western Maryland, and several better preserved examples stand throughout the region. In addition, most of the property's contributing outbuildings, including a barn and a corn crib, have been demolished, and the property no longer retains its architectural integrity or character. Therefore, the resource is recommended eligible under Criterion C. Eligibility under Criterion D cannot be determined as the resource has not undergone archaeological testing.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This frame farmhouse is situated in a hilly area on Avilton-Lonaconing Road approximately $\frac{1}{4}$ mile east of the intersection with Avilton Road. The house faces southwest. It is a two story, three bay by one bay gable roof structure with a two story two bay by one bay ell. The house has a gable facade, shingled, with jig-sawn trim and a single pane window. A two story, two bay by one bay square addition is located on the rear northeast elevation. A single shed enclosure runs the length of the facade. The house is entered from the norhtwest elevation of this enclosure and from the northwest elevation of the addition.

An exterior cinderblock chimney is located on the southeast elevation. The original windows have been replaced (and shortened) by modern, one over one sash windows. Single pane windows appear in the gables of the main block, where they have not yet been removed, predimeted window heads appear over the windows. The house rests on a stone foundation. The original German siding covers the main structure with tar paper on the additions (facade and rear). Corrugated metal covers the roof.

A barn with a concrete silo as well as a corn crib and chicken house are also located on the property.
