The Edward Hachman House is located several yards from Cove Road, in an area of level farmland. To the NE of the house are a house trailer and a smaller dwelling.

The house is a two-story, gable roofed dwelling measuring three bays across the facade. The facade points N. A one-story, shed roofed addition is attached to the S elevation and a kitchen section is attached to the E end of the addition.

The house is constructed of logs, resting on a stone foundation. The logs have been covered with German siding which has been subsequently covered with red, brick-patterned asphalt siding. The windows are two over two sash on the facade and the kitchen section, with pedimental window heads and plain board surrounds. The W gable end is unfenestrated. On the S elevation, the windows on the second floor and on the addition are modern one over one sash. The roof is covered with corrugated metal.

The house has two exterior stove chimneys. A brick chimney with a low stone foundation is placed N of center on the E gable end, and a brick chimney with a high stone foundation is attached to the E end of the S elevation of the kitchen section. A one-story, shed roofed porch covers the facade. Its roof is supported by four chamfered posts and is covered with asphalt shingles.

The house is currently unoccupied.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

This log house was probably in continuous use from the time it was constructed until recently, when Edward Hachman was placed in a nursing home. Its construction is representative of early Garrett County construction types which continued to be popular into the 19th century. Hachman or Hockman is a name found early in the history of the Cove.
