DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This two-story vertical-plank farmhouse faces south. The vertical-plank structure is L-shaped. The one-bay square ell abuts the west end of the rear on the three bay by one bay main block. A two-story galleried porch distinguishes the facade. A porch and an addition fill the corner of the "L".

A two-story gable-roofed bay window lights the west end. Entrances appear in the center of the facade and in the east side of the ell's addition. A cellar entrance is located at the ell's north end where the land slopes away from the stone foundation.

2/2 sash windows light the house. The building is covered with insul-brick except on the scallop-shingled gables. The house retains a slate roof which includes a section of scalloped slates. Jigsawn bargeboards and eaves trim decorate the house. The front porch is supported by tapered round columns. A jigsawn balustrade encloses the upper level. Sidelights and a transom surround the entrance.

The floor plan consists of a central stair hall flanked by a room to either side.

Interior four-panel doors are topped by transoms and surrounded by a symmetrical molding ending in corner blocks. Narrow beaded boards cover the ceiling and form wainscoting topped by heavily molded chair rails. The stair, built by Fred Fox of Friendsville, includes foliar-patterned step ends, turned balusters, and a turned, knobbed newel post with an applied, scroll-topped support post.

The house is heated by a central brick chimney and by a brick stove-flue chimney located at the northeast corner of the ell addition.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

This house was owned by Alfred Kelly, but it is not known whether it was built for him. The house was constructed in the late 19th century and bought by Jeff Frazee, an ancestor of the present owner, in 1905.

This is one of the most elaborately detailed farmhouses in Garrett County. It ranks with Victorian dwellings more commonly found in town centers, such as Friendsville and Oakland. Many features of the house resemble those found at its neighbor, G-II-A-154.
