The single-family dwelling at 850 First Avenue in Friendsville, Garrett County, MD., is not located in a National Register Historic District, nor is it eligible for individual listing on the National Register.

The 2-1/2-story frame dwelling was probably built in the last years of the 19th century, or the first decade of the 20th century. The three-bay, central-passage dwelling with a 2-1/2-story rear ell, follows a common residential building form that is ubiquitous in rural Maryland. The building stands as a representative example of its type and form, and though it features some fine detailing, such as the decorative window casings around the gable end windows, the building lacks the architectural distinctiveness and integrity to qualify for listing on the National Register under Criterion C. The property is not known to have associations with persons or events significant to our past, and is thus not eligible under Criteria A or B.
