Ahern House
G-IV-A-225
5382 Hutton Road
Oakland vicinity
1920
Private

The Ahern House is a two-story, frame, side gable-roofed house with a stone foundation wall, vinyl siding and aluminum soffits, and single light, double-hung, modern replacement sash windows. The original front porch is presently enclosed.

The Ahern House, erected in 1920 according to local tax records, is associated with a pattern of settlement expansion in outlying areas beyond Oakland's town limits. Newly constructed or realized roads opened up agricultural lands to residential development. Beginning in the late nineteenth century, Hutton Road linked the county seat to Crellin and soon after houses followed. Although altered, this house is typical of early twentieth century domestic architecture.

Prepare both a one paragraph summary and a comprehensive description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

The Ahern House is located at 5382 Hutton Road. Situated on the east side of the highway, the property sits on half an acre and is bordered by a steep earthen bank on the east elevation, a row of fruit tree saplings on the south elevation, the road's pavement edge on the west and a treeline to the north. The dwelling sits approximately thirty feet away from Hutton Road parallel to the highway, and is built on a slight rise which drops off sharply at the rear elevation. Just north of the house is a two car wide parking area that fronts a garage.

This is a two-story, frame, side-gable roofed house with a stone foundation wall, vinyl siding and aluminum soffits, and single light, double-hung, modern replacement sash windows. The original front porch is presently enclosed, has a picture window, vinyl siding, and a concrete block foundation. A full width, single story, single pile, gable roofed addition is appended to the rear wall. This wing has a two bay wide, frame extension which was added to its east wall. Both roofs are sheathed with asphalt shingle siding and an exterior concrete block chimney flue is found at the southeastern elevation. Another exterior concrete block flue is situated on the main block's northern wall.

Each of the dwellings three single leaf door are different: the enclosed porch unit is a fifteen light door with wood surrounds; the wing door on the northeast elevation is metal with a single light and plastic mullions; and the northeast elevation rear addition unit is an altered glass and wooden panel model. North of the house is a free-standing, single-story, wood frame, facade gable-roofed garage with asphalt shingle siding and double leaf vertical wood panelled sliding doors.
