Maulsby District
136-148 Maulsby
Bel Air
Private

This double row of 13 tenant houses, 12 single family units and one double unit (145-147), on Maulsby is a unique district of workingman's housing in Bel Air. When the railroad came to Bel Air in 1883 it brought great change. Warehouses for the expanding Harford County canning industry sprang up around the tracks and business activity around the station increased. Mrs. Mary Dallam subdivided her lands around the railroad in 1883 and called the district Major Dallam's Addition. Around 1885 these two rows of houses were built by Joseph Streett. Around 1905 it was called Streett's Row. The district may have been Bel Air's first speculative sub-division.

The houses are typical two bay shotgun houses, but they have the unusual touch of a bracketed cornice. Most of them have shed-roofed porches, although two have gable-roofed porches.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This group of 13 tenant houses is on both sides of Maulsby just west of Mast in the Town of Bel Air, Harford County, Maryland. The basic house is a two bay shot-gun, two stories tall, covered in asphalt shingle. The windows are 6/6 double-hung sash. The roofs are flat. The only decorative touch is the brackets supporting the thin cornice at the top. Each house has a porch. Most are shed roofed carried on plain square posts. Number 137 and 141 have gable-roofed porches and thicker posts. Several porches are enclosed. Entrances alternate between west and east bays. They have a two pane transom over a glass and panel door. A single story shed addition to the rear completes these simple workingman's homes.

Number 145-47, the westernmost on the south side of the street is a duplex but is merely a double of the others.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

This double row of 13 tenant houses, 12 single family units and one duplex (145-147), on Maulsby is a unique district of workingman's housing in Bel Air. When the railroad came to Bel Air in 1883 it caused a great deal of change. Warehouses for the expanding Harford County canning industry sprang up around the track. The business activity around the station increased, and Mrs. Mary Dallam subdivided lands she owned north of the tracks and west of Rockspring. "Major Dallam's addition to Bel Air" or Dallam's First Addition was recorded July 21, 1883, in the County land records (49/183). It consisted of 18 lots between the tracks and what is now Dallam Avenue. Most of the lots sold in the next two years. Joseph Streett bought lots #3-6 on the south side of Maulsby for $800 in October 1883 (49/236). Lots #5 and #6 house six tenant houses, five singles and a duplex, built in 1885. These are #139-147 in the Maulsby District. The date of the houses on the north side (136-148) is uncertain but the similar detailing suggests a similar date. The land, lots #11 and #12, was sold by Mrs. Dallam to Noble L. Mitchell for $700 in August 1884 (52/56). He sold them to John H. L. Watts in 1886 for $750 (57/374). The tenant houses must have been built shortly thereafter, but there is no indication in the documents. The property stayed in the Watts family until 1926 when it was sold to Joseph Kraft (195/422). There are indications that Streett built 10 tenant houses in all there on Maulsby in 1884 and 1885. Perhaps he built them all, and yet the north lots (11 & 12) sold for $750 in 1886, just $50 more than they had brought in 1884. At any rate, the houses on both sides of the street are similar - speculative housing built in the last quarter of the 19th century. Their exteriors are very little changed today. The two on the south side of the street (137 and 141) have different porches. A couple of porches have been enclosed. That is all.

This area seems to have been white as Alice Anne Street was, then and later, black. Around 1905 part of it was known as Street's Row.

Today the houses on the south side, except for the duplex, are owner-occupied, and their condition shows it. Those on the north side are rental units.
