Cool Branch Farm Tenant House
Cool Branch Road
Churchville, Md. 21028

Originally a tenant house on Cool Branch Farm, this part of the farm with this house was recently sold to the owners of Windmill Hill Farm. The house was probably built while Jeremiah McIlvain owned the farm made up of the tracts "Halls Rich Neck" and "Good Neighborhood" from 1843 until 1894. McIlvain made many improvements on the farm including enlarging and re-modelling the brick house and constructing one of the two extant barns, the corn crib, granary, and wagon shed.

Although inhabited within the past 25 years, this abandoned house has deteriorated badly and probably will not be standing much longer.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This 2-story clapboard house, originally situated on Cool Branch Farm and now on Windmill Hill Farm, is located north of Cool Branch Road and on Cool Branch Run.

Set on a raised uncoursed rubblestone foundation this house is 3 bays wide and one room deep and the gable-roof runs on an east-west axis. There is a single brick chimney in the east end and entrances in the first story center bays of both sides. The south side has 3 windows in the 2nd story and the north side has 2, while windows flank the entrance on both sides. Both ends are blank except for 1 window in each gable. There is an entrance to the basement in the south corner of the east end. The cornice is boxed, but otherwise much of the woodwork including the window sash is missing. Where clapboards are missing the balloon frame, hewn sill, and circular sawn lath are visible. The clapboards are fastened with wire nails.

The interior has a two-room plan with a winder staircase in the northeast corner. There is a stone fireplace in the east wall, although no fireplace in the second story. The rafters are tree-trunks with bark on them, pegged together and the attic floor joists are hewn.
