The McMullen House, 318 Maitland Ave., faces east on a tree-shaded lot in Fulford Park. It is a 3 bay brick bungalow with a gabled front dormer showing 3 windows. The extension of the roof that forms the porch is supported by tapered wooden posts resting on brick piers. The roof and the porch extend past the block of the house on the south. In the rear, a gabled ell meets the front section at right angles, and a partially enclosed shed porch occupies over 2/3 of the rear elevation. Gable ends on the north, south, and west are decorated with a triangle of wooden strips. Windows are 3/1 double-hung sash, doubled in the facade and first story of the north elevation.

The early 1920s saw three new additions to the Town of Bel Air: Fulford Park (1922), Ingleside (1923), and Kenmore (1924). In each case the lots were sold at auction. Fulford Park was subdivided by Oliver T. Wallace of Wilmington, North Carolina. The local agent was W. M. Nicholls. It was named for the Fulford family whose land it once was. The McMullen House is a handsome brick bungalow built in 1933. It is the sort of house being built by the thousands in American cities at the time, but it has a very urban look for Bel Air, where brick was not often used for building houses before 1945. The interior use of space in the house is unusual, too. Besides the usual living room, dining room, and kitchen on the first floor, the house originally had two bedrooms and a bath.

The McMullin House, 318 Maitland Ave., faces east on a tree-shaded lot in Fulford Park. Built in 1933, it is a 3 bay brick bungalow with a gabled front dormer showing 3 windows. The extension of the roof that forms the porch is supported by tapered wooden posts resting on brick piers. The roof and the porch extend past the block of the house on the south. In the rear, a gabled ell meets the front section at right angles, and a partially enclosed shed porch occupies over 2/3 of the rear elevation. Gable ends on the north, south, and west are decorated with a triangle of wooden strips. Windows are 3/1 double-hung sash, doubled in the facade and first story of the north elevation.

Entry in the middle bay of the facade is directly into the living room, which occupies the whole front of the house. Formerly the south part of the living room was a bedroom which communicated with the bath and second bedroom to the rear. The present owners removed the north wall to make one large room. Woodwork has a slight cornice. The dining room is to the northwest, with the kitchen behind it. To the south west one finds a straight run enclosed staircase along the north wall. Upstairs there is a square post balustrade. South of that is a hall which leads to a bedroom in the rear and to the bathroom in the center. Upstairs are 3 bedrooms and a bath, their ceilings shaped by the roofline.

The house stayed in the McMullen family until 1957. The current owners, Leo and Betty Wallet, enlarged the living room by removing the wall between it and the front bedroom. The living room now occupies the whole front of the house.
