

McFadden House
HA 1908

This circa 1901 two story frame house is located on the east side of Main Street in the village of Cardiff, Maryland. The plain vernacular structure is comprised of the original late Victorian house which is overshadowed by a large two story addition of a walk-in basement and first-story apartments to the north. As with the majority of houses of the town and unique to this region, the main house makes use of the region's world-famous slate in its roof shingles and coursed foundation. Built as a single family residence, this house was converted into a commercial enterprise with the large addition built onto the north endwall in the late 1940's. The building served as the postoffice from 1950 to 1966.

Prepare both a summary paragraph and a general description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

This two story frame house is located on the east side of Main Street in the village of Cardiff, Maryland. The structure is comprised of the original late Victorian house which is overshadowed by a large two story addition of a walk-in basement and first-story apartments to the north. The original house is three bays by a deep two with a southern service ell off the rear, east wall. A projecting cross gable is centered on the north-south gable roof of the west, main facade with a chimney directly above it at the main roof peak. A hip-roofed porch with square posts and a simple fence balustrade runs the length of the first-story main facade, the hip roof extending to become the roof of the northern addition. Both the original building's roof and coursed foundation are of the region's renowned slate. The house and addition are re-covered with white vinyl siding.

The original house is set on a high, raised foundation, with the main entrance to the house located at the south first-story bay of the main facade. The door's multi-light sidelights and transom provide the only ornamentation to this simple vernacular house. 2/2 sash windows articulate in all other main facade bays, with a 1/1 sash centered at the projecting cross gable. On the southern endwall, service ell, and gable, single windows are located in the upper and lower east bays, upper and lower ell bays, and centered at the gable, respectively. The northern endwall has the addition covering the first story with windows at the two upper story bays.

The plain addition located to the north of the original house has a central door onto Main Street at street level flanked by two large picture windows with multi-light sidelights. Two offset double 2/2 sash windows are located in the upper story of the addition's main facade. Multi-light windows overlook the adjacent parking area to the north at the ground level floor. In an effort to blend with the main house, the addition's roof is of a shallow hipped variety.

Prepare both a summary paragraph of significance and a general statement of history and support.

This circa 1901 plain vernacular structure is one of the town's many houses that were built during the "boom era" of the late nineteenth century. The rapid development that occurred during this time was due to the area's tremendous slate quarrying industry that exploded with the completion of the Maryland and Pennsylvania Railroad. As with the majority of houses of the town and unique to this region, the main house makes use of the region's world-famous slate in its roof shingles and coursed foundation. Built as a single family residence, this house was converted into a commercial enterprise with the large addition built onto the north endwall in the late 1940's. The building served as the postoffice from 1950 to 1966¹.

Originally owned by Thomas Hawkins (farmer) in a patented land grant known as "Hawkins Chance", this land was part of the tract sold by the Hawkins family to Rowland Parry, a Welsh quarry owner who operated one of the first prominent commercial quarries in the area. It was Parry who exhibited Peach Bottom slate in the London Crystal Palace exposition in 1850, winning it international recognition as the world's finest slate. "Hawkins Chance" was divided and sold in pieces, passing mostly through the hands of Parry's relatives and countrymen in various forms. The parcel of 17 acres that created this lot was sold to the South Delta Land Company in 1896 through an Equity Case on behalf of Parry's great niece. As with this house, most of the structures at the north end of Cardiff were built around the turn of the century, after this subdivision took place.
