DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

When recorded (5/30/80) this structure was vacant and deteriorated. In its original state, this building was a two-level bank house. It is of stone construction utilizing fairly large uncoursed fieldstone. Its original orientation was to the northwest being three bays wide and the equivalent of two deep with a gable-end roof running northeast to southwest. The plan was altered to that of an end entrance longitudinal plan either early in this century or late in the last. Windows were blocked, doors cut through, etc., but the original fenestration was quite regular utilizing 6/6 sash. All original windows and doors are framed with heavy beaded frames utilizing mortise-tenon trunnel joining. Its plan provides for a single room on the first level, a room that may have been subdivided on the second and an attic. Although the steepness of the bank into which it is built has been mounded up making the slope steeper, the basement kitchen is characteristic of a bankhouse. A single interior end chimney is located on the southwest end.

Oral history and structural evidence suggest that a frame addition (possibly an enclosed porch) wrapped around the west corner providing a later "upstairs" kitchen and bedrooms. It was destroyed by fire in the last decade.

INTERIOR

Interior alterations including a complete replacement of the floor obscure the traffic patterns of the original plan. It is presumed that the principal entrances were the centrally located door of the southeast facade and the basement door of the southwest. Enclosed winders in the west corner next to the chimney are likely to have connected all three levels of the building (see HA 157 for a similar building). At present, there are no interior connections between the second level and either the cellar or attic.

BASEMENT

The chief characteristic of this room is its fireplace which by its size and hardware can probably be read as a cooking fireplace. It is a stone fireplace with an opening 40" wide, 46" high and 22" deep. The location of the fireplace at the southwest end gives symmetry to this space as does the fact that it was originally lighted by two windows in each side of the room. Hewn lintels can still be seen in the southeast wall where windows were filled in. This entire wall is now below ground and bulging badly from outside pressure.

All of the original windows in this house have openings with tapered sides acting as light catchers. The surfaces were plastered and painted but not paneled. The small window in the north bay of the northwest wall is the exception being completely rectangular with a wooden frame utilizing mortise-tenon-trunnel joining. The size and placement of this window may relate to an earlier porch.

The walls are plastered and long with the ceiling are whitewashed. Puncheons are left exposed.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Lee House at Frogtown

Along with its outbuildings this stone dwelling is part of Harford Countys important collection of early stone buildings. Its' vertical plan providing for single rooms placed one on the other with a kitchen in the basement has the regional quality of a bank-house.

While it is not known if members of the family lived here as now the building does gain some importance by being one of the buildings owned by the Otho Lee family during the 19th century. Throughout most of the century that family played a key role in how the area around Frogtwon developed and is a survivor of one of its early ages.

7. Description

Continuation Sheet #1

SECOND LEVEL

It appears that sometime after the original entrance facade was enclosed the central entrance plan was maintained by punching a hole in the middle of the southeast wall or by enlarging a central window. The ground outside was raised in height to make this new entrance at ground level.

The building has also had a period of a longitudinal plan resulting from a side entrance being cut into the northeast end. The north corner of the room was partitioned off at one point. The survival of riven laths in its ceiling suggests it was early as do successive layers of plaster and paint in the partition ghost of the northeast wall. Whitewash behind that mark, however, raises the doubt of an original partition. At any rate, its presence once constituted a "side hall" of sorts.

The end chimney projects into the room 18"; if there was a fireplace it is closed in. The present trim is very plain and late. It covers plaster on the southeast wall that uses 1921 newspaper for binding if there was any earlier trim it does not survive. Riven laths survive in bits and pieces at both ends of the room, in most places they were replaced with more modern materials. Where the ceiling is missing altogether one sees a mixture of hewn and sawn joists.

ATTIC

There are no clearly visible signs that the attic was an accesible living space. The gable walls are plastered and there is random width flooring. Casement windows in the northeast gable and a single window on the north side appear to have lighted the area. Patchwork in the flooring in the southwest gable by the chimney and a punched through window suggest where stairs may have been although there is no special spacing of the joists.

HISTORY

This dwelling is one of those buildings appearing on the maps of 1858 and 1878. Land records and wills make this fact clear. What is not clear, however, is who actually occupied the structure as it is but one of seven or more buildings on the 1858 map attributed to "Lee" ownership.

Since the building predates 1858 and stands on land that appears in the will of Otho Scott in 1863 this acquisition is crucial. The 1858 map, however, shows O. Scotts residence on the east side of the main road much further to the south. The real problem in pinpointing his acquisition lies in the fact that Otho Scott appears as both grantee and grantor in literally hundreds of transactions between 1824 and 1863. A Daniel Scott before him did as well and so did Otho's son Daniel. Otho's other son, William G. Scott was apparently a lawyer (see Inventory of William G. Scott _____, 1888) and the entire Scott family seems to have had extensive land dealings in the area. While this fact obscures the history of this particular site, it makes clear the role of that family in the development of the Frogtown area. This building can and should be seen as part of an era.

CWB 7/1022	Nov 6, 1863	Otho Scott

1. To Daniel 220 acres on the road leading from "Bel Air to the White House".
2. To William 130 acres centijuous to Daniel meeting "the mouth of the Double Run".
Daniel outlived Wm. and these two pieces came together in Amanda'a inheritance.
3. To Susan 350 acres centijuous to William and being bounded by Double Run and road from Hickory to Frogtown.

William and Susan are minors, Daniel is guardian.

GRANTEE

Between 1824 and 1863 Otho Scott appears as both grantor and grantee on literally hundreds of transactions. Often he appears as trustee. A Daniel S. does go before him and his son Daniel does go after him. Wm. G. (brother of Daniel and son of Otho) appears quite a few times as well and his inventory of 1888 contains "a set of law books in Bel Air"

This is the first recorded Otho Scott as grantee and it is for land in East side of road from Bel Air to Coopstown; 100 acres.

MAPS

Herrick 1858 - shows a building in this location with "Scott" and "S. Ady" being printed near it. "O. (Otho) Scott" residence is on the East side of the main road almost down to Moores Mill Rd.

Martinet 1878 - shows a single building but has "Wm. Davidson" printed next to it*; it shows Wm. G. Scott and Daniel owning quite a few buildings.

* Wm. Davidson does not appear in Harford County Lands Records 1850--1878.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This structure faces towards the east and is a single-story building, two bays by three, with walls of uncoursed fieldstone, covered with stucco. There are 2 X 2 attic panes on the eastern and western extremes, but all of the other sashes have either been removed or covered by board-and-batten shutters. These openings are in framed recesses. An interesting facet of this structure is that there is a door on each facade; the northern and southern ones being centered and the eastern and western ones being off to one side. The western aspect has only a door and an attic window, and also has the most stucco over the walls. The roof is gable-front and covered with asphalt shingles, with a box cornice and soffit. There are no porches, with the exception of a cinder-block stoop before the eastern portal. A brick inside-end flue is sited along the western extreme of the roof.

Directly west of this structure is a smaller outbuilding, composed of the same stone and with a bay dimension of one by one. A small shed porch encloses a board-and-batten door on the eastern aspect. The roof is gable-front and tin, and the gables are frame with a single attic opening staring towards the tollhouse.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

This is not an imposing structure by any means, but it is unique in that each facade contains an entrance. It could possibly be pre-1800, but there is no way of really ascertaining this, for the 1798 Federal Tax List only recorded dwellings worth $100 or more. The land is part of Scott's Improvement, which was patented by Daniel Scott in 1701 and resurveyed in 1731, consisting of 393 acres. At his death, the property transferred to James Scott in 1745. Parts were also devised to Benjamin Scott in 1761 and to James Scott in 1779. The 1783 Tax List and the earlier land records break down the tracts in the vicinity of this building to the following, listed here with their 1783 owners:

Eleanor Durham- 155 acres of Edmund's Camp and Bilberry Hall

Samuel Durham- 242 acres of Addition to Bilberry Hall, Ewing's Contrivance, Friend's Advice, Second Addition to Durham's Meadows, Bilberry Hall

Joseph Lewis- 229 acres of Ewing's Contrivance, Third Addition to Bilberry Hall

James Scott- 194 acres of Ewing's Contrivance

The area containing the structure left the Scott family during the first third of the Nineteenth Century, but returned when Otho Scott purchased the tract in 1832. The 1878 Martenet Map lists the owner as being a William G. Scott.
