DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This moderately altered structure faces southwards towards Deer Creek. It is two-story, with walls of bevelled frame over log. A wing has been recently added to the western end of the dwelling, measuring three bays by two and composed of frame. The northern aspect of the main structure still has exposed logs. The windows are in nailed frames and are 6 X 1, and there are also two small windows in the eastern end. A door is located on the western end of the addition, another is situated on the southern exposure of the main portion, and a covered-over doorway is opposite this on the northern side. The roof is gable-flank and covered with asphalt shingles. Two stone outside-end flues are positioned on the eastern and western extremes of the dwelling, made of stone and stucco-covered. A four-bay, shed-roof porch is sited on the southern side, partially enclosed and resting on stone pillars.

Just east of the house is the entrance to an underground ice house and a meathouse. The meathouse is a chinked log structure, built up on a high stone foundation. There are doors on both the cellar and the first-floor levels on the west side. A gable front asphalt roof protrudes far beyond the doorway. West of the house are the reconstructed carriage house and barn.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

This structure does appear on the 1798 Federal Tax List and was perhaps the early homestead of Matthew Wiley, Sr. The tract on which the house sits was called "Black Rock", acquired by the McKemson Brothers from the lord proprietor of Maryland in 1771. In 1781 the tract was sold to Matthew Wiley, Sr., who probably built this house within the last years of the Eighteenth Century. The nearby mill was built soon afterwards; and the property was passed on to Matthew Wiley, Jr., in 1840 and to George N. Wiley in the 1870's. Two-story log structures are not so commonplace and this is indeed such a building.
