

Cooper & Preston's Old Church/ Town Hall Antiques
3700 Aldino Road
Aberdeen, Maryland 21001

The Christian Church at Avondale (now known as Aldino) was constructed in 1878 on a $\frac{1}{2}$ -acre parcel of "Woods Meadows Enlarged". In 1913, the Aldino Country Club acquired the building and owned it until 1943. It was then used as an outlet for farm machinery by Nelson Cooper, and since 1976 has housed an antiques store. During World War II it was used as a town hall and theatre for minstrel shows.

The structure is a fine country gothic church with much of its exterior detail intact, including the board-and-batten siding and Gothic window arches and muntins.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This board-and-batten el-shaped church, now containing an antique shop, is located on the northeast corner of Aldino and Stepney Roads in Aldino.

With an addition on the east end, the structure is three bays wide and two bays deep with a gable roof. The roof has a center gable on the south side and brick chimneys with flue pipes in both ends. Windows have pointed arches and tracery, although the double-leafed doors in the center bay of the south facade appear to have been replaced. The gables contain round windows.

The south facade has a central entrance flanked by a window on each side. The west end has two windows and the north end has a door, with a shed-roofed addition to the west filling in the el.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

In 1877, Robert and Sarah R. Walker and George W. and Sarah A. Walker sold 1/2 acre of "Woods Meadows Enlarged" for $70 to the Trustees of the Christian Church at Avondale.¹ Presumably, then, the structure standing now was built at that time for the Christian Church (Aldino was formerly known as Avondale). On the 1878 Martenet's Map, there are two structures near this location: one is a schoolhouse, the other is unmarked. The 1858 Jennings and Herrick Map shows no structures on or near this location. In 1913, the Aldino Country Club acquired this lot² and owned it until 1943. It was then used as an outlet for farm machinery for Nelson Cooper,³ and since 1976 has housed an antiques store. It is said to have been used as a town hall and theatre for minstrel shows during World War II.

The structure is a fine country gothic church with much of its exterior shape and detail intact, including the board and batten siding and Gothic window arches and pinnacles.
