DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Robert Sellers House is a two-section log and frame house dating from the mid or late 19th century which is located about 100 yards west of Hoopes Road near the intersection of Gibson Road in Harford County, Maryland. The main section of the house faces east.

The Sellers House original section is a one-story log building with a three bay elevation and central entry facing south. The entry is shaded by a braced shed roof. The small flanking windows are unmatched, with the east window a 2/2 sliding sash and the west window slightly smaller with a six light sash. A shed addition adjoins the log structure on the north. A single dormer apparently added at a later time is located over the door on the south elevation. The log section exterior is asbestos shingle.

The log building adjoins a two story frame section with a stone foundation and a shed porch on the east elevation, which is now the main entrance of the house. This section has two bays on the east elevation and two on the south over a cellar entrance with a dutch door. The exterior of this section is covered with aluminum siding.
