House of Silence
Woodbine
Private

circa 1877

The House of Silence faces east on the north side of Union Chapel Road just west of Cattail Creek. It is a two bay wide, one room deep, two story high, gabled roof (running north-south) log covered with German siding house, resting on a fieldstone foundation, with square brick chimney inset into its north wall and a one bay wide, one room deep, two story high, gabled roof (running north-south) frame (covered with German siding) north addition, resting on a brick foundation.

The interior features one large downstairs room in the main log building block, with two equal, second floor bedrooms.

A narrow, enclosed staircase to the second floor is placed in the southwest corner of the living room. It features a batten wood door to a closet beneath the staircase and a battenwood door to the staircase itself. Interesting, little, narrow cupboards are also located on either side of the downstairs fireplace, centered on the north wall of the room, which is lighted by an east, west and south window. A door on the east side of the mantle place leads into the kitchen addition.

The House of Silence is a good example of Howard County vernacular log architecture, associated with Ridgely's Reserve and William T. Silence.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The House of Silence faces east on the north side of Union Chapel Road just west of the Cattail Creek. It is a two bay wide, one room deep, two story high, gabled roof (running north-south) log covered with German siding house, resting on a fieldstone foundation, with square brick chimney inset into its north wall and a one bay wide, one room deep, two story high, gabled roof (running north-south) frame (covered with German siding) north addition, resting on a brick foundation.

EAST ELEVATION

The east elevation features a one story high, shed roofed, log, open porch, supported by two posts along the main building block, covering a rectangular, cross paneled entrance door in the south bay. North rests a rectangular, double-hung window, holding two-over-two lights, beneath which is placed the cellar door leading to the stone walled, dirt floor basement of the house.

The east wall of the addition holds a four light, rectangular, paneled entrance door in its north bay and a two-over-two light rectangular window in its south bay. A second floor, shed roof addition has been added to the roof of what was once a kitchen porch but has now been enclosed. A two-over-two light second floor window is placed in the east wall of this addition.

CONTINUE ON SEPARATE SHEET IF NECESSARY

WEST ELEVATION

The west elevation holds two two-over-two, first floor windows and two rectangular, double-hung, second floor windows. That on the north holds six-over-six lights, that on the south holds two-over-two.

NORTH ELEVATION

The north elevation holds a six-over-nine light, rectangular, second floor window and a two light rectangular attic window.

A one bay wide, one bay deep, one story high, gabled roof (running north-south) cinderblock, one car garage runs along the north elevation of the building.

THE INTERIOR

The interior features one large downstairs room in the main log building block, with two equal, second floor bedrooms.

A narrow, enclosed staircase to the second floor is placed in the southwest corner of the living room. It features a batten wood door to a closet beneath the staircase and a battenwood door to the staircase itself. Interesting, little, narrow cupboards are also located on either side of the downstairs fireplace, centered on the north wall of the room, which is lighted by an east, west and south window. A door on the east side of the mantle place leads into the kitchen addition.

This addition once held an open porch on its east wall, which has now been enclosed, with the east wall opened up to create a large kitchen. A narrow, enclosed staircase is located in its southwest corner, leading up to the large bedroom above the kitchen. A second floor bath is located over the enclosed porch section of the kitchen, lighted by an east window.

A north rectangular, cross paneled, north entrance leads into the cinderblock, one car garage, constructed along the north wall of the kitchen addition. The kitchen was at one time a lean to with an outside stove for cooking.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The House of Silence is a good example of Howard County vernacular log architecture,¹ associated with Ridgely's Reserve² and William T. Silence.³

Explanatory Notes

1. The House of Silence is a good example of vernacular log architecture. Commonly, in Howard County, the log house of the nineteenth century rested on a full, fieldstone foundation with log joists holding its first floor. The log construction was covered by clapboard on the exterior with its interior walls covered with wood lathing covered with plaster. Small cupboards are located on either side of the fireplace and under the staircases.

2. The House of Silence is located on a part of Ridgely's Reserve, noted on an old deed from Dennis Gaither to William T. Silence in the Howard County Land Records (See Title Search for the liber, folio).

3. The house was completely constructed by William T. Silence, who acquired some 74 acres of Ridgely's Reserve from Dennis Gaither in 1877 and another 17 acres shortly after, accumulating some 92 acres of land, which was noted on the 1878 Hopkin's Atlas. In 1929 his daughter, Jessie Silence Everly, acquired the property, mortgaging it in 1931 and finally selling it to Mr. and Mrs. Snyder in 1934. It is presently owned by Mrs. Celine Sigelman.

CONTINUE ON SEPARATE SHEET IF NECESSARY
