Gable roofed with slightly flared eaves, this two-bay, two-story frame house faces south onto Old Columbia Pike. It has two 6/6 windows on the 2nd floor, and one in the east bay of the first floor, with a door in the west, with a 2-pane transom. There is a front porch with chamfered posts and a balustrade.

As the house is on a hillside, there are steps to the east of the building leading down to a secondary entrance. This east elevation is three stories high on the main block. The first story is 4 bays wide with a door in the third (l-r) bay with a 3-light transom and 8-light outer glass door. The three windows on this level have 6/6 sash. The 2nd story has three 6/6 sash windows, with one centered in the slightly projecting main block, and two in the rear wing. The third story of the main block (also projecting) has one centered 6/6 window.

The rear of the building goes down one further level and there is a door in the right bay of the rear facade, which is a stone basement level. The two floors above have two 6/6 sash windows each.

The west facade has no windows, but has a small hip-roofed frame addition with one small 6-light window on its south side.
