MIPH Inventory No. HO-747
Ca. 1900
Maycroft tenant house and detached kitchen
6064 Old Lawyers Hill Road
Elkridge, Howard County, Maryland
Private

The dwelling at 6064 Old Lawyers Hill Road was constructed ca. 1900 as a tenant house for the large Queen Anne style dwelling known as Maycroft located at 6060 Old Lawyers Hill Road. The wood-frame building originally comprised 700 square feet and has been substantially modified during the twentieth century. Outbuildings include a former detached kitchen, a former chicken coop, and a barn constructed in 1999.

The main residence and the detached kitchen are contributing elements to the Lawyers Hill Historic District, a National Register historic district listed in 1993 for its significance under Criteria A and C. The purpose of this project was to evaluate the dwelling and outbuildings at 6064 Old Lawyers Hill Road for individual listing in the National Register of Historic Places as part of a noise barrier analysis undertaken by the Maryland Department of Transportation, State Highway Administration. The dwelling no longer retains sufficient integrity of design, materials, workmanship, or feeling to be individually eligible for listing in the National Register of Historic Places as representing a ca. 1900 tenant house. The detached kitchen was moved from Maycroft to its current location. In general, moved buildings are not eligible individually for listing in the National Register of Historic Places (Criterion Consideration B). The barn constructed in 1999 and the playhouse remodeled from a former chicken coop do not possess sufficient age for National Register consideration.

Prepare both a one paragraph summary and a comprehensive description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

Summary

The dwelling at 6064 Old Lawyers Hill Road was constructed ca. 1900 as a tenant house for the large Queen Anne style dwelling known as Maycroft located at 6060 Old Lawyers Hill Road. The wood-frame building originally comprised 700 square feet and has been substantially modified during the twentieth century. The house is set at the end of a long driveway surrounded by mature trees and formal gardens. Outbuildings include a former detached kitchen, a former chicken coop, and a barn constructed in 1999.

Description

The wood-frame, two-story tenant house originally was a rectangular dwelling of simple design. The original foundation was dry wall rubble. A new basement was poured when the addition was constructed on the west end of the house. The owner reports that an original cooking hearth survives in the basement under the house (Van Wensil, personal communication June 2000). The side-gable roof is sheathed with asphalt shingles and currently exhibits a saltbox profile. The walls of the original house are clad with horizontal boards that were installed during the occupancy of the current owner. Vertical board and batten cladding marks the addition on the western end of the building, as well as the on the east screen porch addition. The windows are wood sash, multi-pane casement windows that replicate the design of the original windows.

The house evolved over several construction campaigns. The original house was most likely one-and-a-half stories with a porch on the north side. During the 1950s, the roof on the south elevation was modified to incorporate a shed dormer into the second floor. This modification resulted in a shallow gable on the south side of the house. The current owners incorporated the back porch into the main body of the house to house a kitchen and a bathroom. The current owners also installed heating and electricity. The addition on the west end of the house was constructed ca. 1990. The interior core of the house retains its original simple moldings and window and door surrounds of a ca. 1900 tenant house.

Outbuildings associated with the house include a one-story, wood-frame studio that originally served as a detached kitchen for Maycroft. This building is clad with wood horizontal drop siding. It has a front-gable roof sheathed with asphalt shingles. The building features a full-façade porch. The current owners moved the former kitchen to its current location for use as a pottery studio.

Two other outbuildings include the former chicken coop and the barn. The former chicken coop has been remodeled as a playhouse. The building has board and batten siding and wood-frame windows. The entry is a vertical-wood door. The barn was completed in 1999 and is constructed of materials recycled from a house formerly on the "Edgewood" property.

The gardens on the property are the work of the current owners.

Although the residence and detached kitchen at 6064 Old Lawyers Hill Road are contributing buildings in the Lawyers Hill Historic District, the residence no longer retains the design associated with a ca. 1900 tenant house. The dwelling does not retain sufficient integrity of design, materials, workmanship, or feeling to be individually eligible for listing in the National Register of Historic Places as representing a tenant house. The property does retain integrity of location, setting, and association. The detached kitchen is a moved property, a class of resource generally not eligible for listing in the National Register of Historic Places (Criterion Consideration B). The chicken coop and the barn are recent renovations and constructions.

Summary

The main residence and the detached kitchen, now used as a pottery studio, are contributing elements to the Lawyers Hill Historic District, a National Register historic district listed in 1993 for its significance under Criteria A and C. The historic district was settled as a summer community that was made possible by rail transportation between Elkridge and Baltimore through the construction of the Thomas Viaduct by the B & O Railroad over the Patapso River in 1835. Railroad access made this area accessible to professionals in Baltimore for development as a community of summer homes. The area initially was settled by George Washington Dobbin, a prominent Baltimore lawyer, in the early 1840s. Dobbin invited colleagues John H.B. Latrobe and Thomas Donaldson, also lawyers, to build summer homes nearby. The enclave was named Lawyers Hill. The community contains a variety of housing types ranging from large Victorian summer houses to twentieth-century single-family houses constructed in Craftsman and Colonial Revival styles.

The purpose of this project was to evaluate the dwelling and outbuildings at 6064 Old Lawyers Hill Road for individual listing in the National Register of Historic Places as part of a noise barrier analysis undertaken by the Maryland Department of Transportation, State Highway Administration. The residence at 6064 Old Lawyers Hill Road no longer retains sufficient integrity of design, materials, workmanship, or feeling to be individually eligible for listing in the National Register of Historic Places as representing a tenant house. The detached kitchen was moved from Maycroft to its current location. In general, moved buildings are not eligible individually for listing in the National Register of Historic Places (Criterion Consideration B). The barn constructed in 1999 and the playhouse remodeled from a former chicken coop do not possess sufficient age for National Register consideration.

Resource History

The residence at 6064 Old Lawyers Hill Road was constructed ca. 1900 as a tenant house for Maycroft (HO-447). Maycroft is a large, wood-frame, Queen Anne Style residence that was constructed ca. 1871 for Susan Dobbin Mayer, a daughter of George Washington Dobbin. Susan Mayer was granted title to the property in 1874. The Howard County tax assessment for 1896-1910 recorded the construction of a tenant house valued at $400 on the property by March 1901 (Howard County Tax Assessment 1896-1910). The Mayer family owned the property until 1907. A full chain of title is included in the documentation.

The tenant house originally was occupied by servants who worked at Maycroft. The current owners have interviewed some of the former occupants, who were primarily African American (Van Wensil, personal communication June 2000). Under the ownership of the Mehrings, the property served as a rental unit. The first owner-occupants of the property are the current owners, who acquired the house in 1977. The house had already undergone changes to the roof design before the current owners purchased the house. The current owners have upgraded the building, enclosed a rear porch, and added an addition on the west end.

The detached kitchen originally was located in the yard at the rear of the main house at 6060 Old Lawyers Hill Road. After it stopped being used as a kitchen, the building was converted into a residence for a retired African American servant. The current owners moved the building to its current location for use as a pottery studio (Van Wensil, personal communication, June 2000).
