

DeKalb Smith House
121 B Washington Ave.
Chestertown, Md.

privately owned and rented as apartments

Moved to its present location in 1960 the large Victorian DeKalb Smith dwelling was constructed after 1883 for the former Comptroller of Maryland. Now set back between two lots it is difficult to view. The original location was where the present C & P Telephone Building is.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The west facade of this home formerly faced directly on Washington Ave. and now is only a short distance behind 121 Washington Ave. and is broken into apartments. It is built on a cross gable plan and is a two and 1/2 story frame house in need of care in addition to some restoration. This facade is five bays wide. From l to r one views two 2/2 double hung and shuttered windows with lintels, on both the first and 2nd floors. The cornice of the north gable roof, directly above, is a plain box type. The west gable follows housing the central double door with one light transome and directly above it a 2/2 double hung and shuttered window with lintel. To the side are two elongated side lights. The topmost panes of these and the main window are stained glass. Continuing south there are two 2/2 double hung, shuttered windows with lintels on both first and second floors. In the gable is a 4 paned window, shuttered, with decorated balcony. Directly above this balcony window the framing has been constructed in a fan shaped design. The gable cornice is a rather simple decorated one while the turned posts and balusters of the balcony and the supporting brackets with drops are much more elaborate. In the peak of the gable is an additional decorative motif, which is used on all gables on the west, south and east sides of the house.

From the northern view one can see the additions. At the west end of the north side is a gable with its decorated cornice and motif at the peak. Fish scales sheath the gable and there are three side by side windows and behind them a multilayer capped chimney. Below the gable windows is a shed type roof with box cornice. All roof areas of the house are of composition type shingles. The first and second floors each house, from l to r, two narrow side by side windows, and then two 2/2 double hung windows. The single bay width of the rear, or east of this facade, before the next 2 1/2 story wing abutts it, has one 2/2 narrow window on each level. The first wing, north view, is two bays wide, with A roof and plain box cornice. On each level, from l to r, are a 2/2 window and a 1/1 narrow window. The second, 1 story wing with slight A roof with decoration and finial on the roof ridge, contains, from l to r, two 2/2 windows and a narrow elongated 6 pane window. The final 1 story wing with shed type roof is unbroken on this side.

The east side, or rear of the house, is very broken up. In the largest gable there are the plain box cornice and two 2/2 windows. A single dormer is on the roof to the north of this gable. On the second level are two 2/2 partially shuttered windows. To the south, on the second level and in the southern projection of the dwelling is a single 2/2 window and below it on the first level two 1/1 windows. This second floor makes a right angle at the corner while on the first floor below it the corner has been deleted to form a three sides bay with the east side housing a 1/1 window. There are brackets and a decorated cornice below the second floor right angle. The first 1 1/2 story wing, with its decorated ridge and finial is unbroken, while the final addition with shed roof has a door and 2/2 shuttered window.

The south facade contains two gables and a full view of the tall multilayer capped brick chimney rising from behind the tallest gable. Both gables, one being higher and more to the west, have the decorated cornice with center peak motif, and fish scale shingles. In the highest one are three side by side windows and in the second a two of the same. The cornice above the second floor and that above the three sided bay of the first floor are plain box type. The second floor, from l to r, contains 8 windows, while the first has 6. The easternmost bay on the first level has been extended and there is a flat shed type roof above it. In the addition with decorated ridge there is a single 2/2 window and in the final addition another 2/2 window. The entire house now sits on a cement block foundation and there is a full basement.

A photo of this house in Fred G. Usilton's History of Chestertown shows a porch around the present west and south sides with supporting posts and curved cornice.
