Redue House (Site)
Front Street, Chestertown
2nd quarter 18th Century

The earliest deed found for the Redue House was recorded in 1759, when Thomas Ringgold purchased the property described by the executors as “the Water Lot which Daniel Dulaney made over to Hugh Campbell in 1743 for @600 ... together with the Mansion House or Messuage thereon erected lately in the possession of Nathaniel Palmer”¹ It is curious that Ringgold paid only a third of the 1743 price, as it is likely that the house was standing on the property at the time.

From the one extant photograph, it is not possible to determine the brick bond used in its construction, but the existing southwest and southeast foundation walls are laid in common bond. The structure was three bays long. The central entrance was flanked by two windows with 9/6 sash. Two dormers on either side of the roof had 9/6 sash also – an uncommon, if not unique length of dormer in Kent County. Like the Custom House, the dormers were constructed with a full pediment. Connecting it to the adjoining one-story store building there was a small, one-story filler, probably built in the third quarter of the 18th century, after both properties were in Ringgold’s possession.

The building remained the property of the Ringgold family through most of the 18th century and is possibly “the Counting House,” “Bath House,” or “Dry Goods Store” mentioned in the 1776 will of Thomas Ringgold, V.² In 1796 it was acquired by William Slubey, a local merchant.³ How it was later transferred to Elizabeth Comegys is unknown, but the property is listed as her residence and in her possession in her will of 1819 when she bequeathed it to her daughter, Emeline.⁴

Emeline Comegys later married Joseph Redue, a person who was to distinguish himself in the community, first as merchant in the 300 block of High Street,⁵ and later becoming the Post Master, Sheriff and Tax Collector. In 1831, he purchased the Wharf property between his residence and the river.⁶ In the 1841 Tax Assessment, Joseph Redue's real property was assessed for $900.00 with the following remarks:

"House and Water Lot No. 19 by Self

In good Repair"

His personal property included:

"Stock in Trade Merchandise $2500

Private Securities 500

Live Stock 45

House Hold Furniture 400

Plate 37 oz. 37

Watch Silver 10"⁷

By 1860, the property was in the possession of the Redue's daughter, Miss Josephine Redue, who ran a school and taught privately from her residence.⁸ She mortgaged the property in 1878 to Mary S. Hynson⁹ and in 1886, advertised the property for sale:

"PUBLIC SALE OF DESIRABLE PROPERTY

The Improvements consist of a

STORY AND A-HALF

BRICK DWELLING HOUSE

in ordinary repair

This is one of the most desirable properties in Chestertown having numerous shade trees and a full view of Chester River⁷¹⁰

Apparently, however, Miss Redue did not sell the property. It instead descended to her niece, Maria Waters. Maria and her husband, William sold the property in 1905.¹¹ In 1910 the property was purchased by Wilbur W. Hubbard who demolished its upper story, as well as the buildings next door.¹² He then built four tenements on the old foundations, which remain to this day.

Prepare both a summary paragraph and a general description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

The Redue House Site is important architecturally because of its relationship to the Custom House and its form, a very common 1½ story gable roof structure built into the side of a bank. It is also important as an archaeological site since its foundation or basement walls remain in place and there has been minimal disturbance to the area.

From one extant photograph of its facade, it is not possible to determine the bond used in its brick construction, but the existing southwest and southeast foundation walls are laid in common bond. The structure was three bays long with a central entrance and two flanking windows with 9/6 sash. Two dormers on each side of the roof also had 9/6 sash, an uncommon, if not unique length of dormer in Kent County. The dormers were constructed with a full pediment in the same manner as the Customs House. Two chimneys rose within the gables. Connecting it to the adjoining one story building was a small one story filler, probably built in the third quarter, of the eighteenth century, after it had been acquired by Thomas Ringgold.

The Riverside Foundation still retains a door and window, both of which appear to have been altered at the time the superstructure was added after 1910. For a description of the existing frame structure, see K-325. The riverside elevation can be partly seen in the panoramic view of Chestertown, taken from the bridge prior to its demolition.

Continuation Sheet 8.1

Thomas Ringgold IV had purchased from the heirs of Daniel Dulaney of Annapolis, an un-numbered water lot in 1759, "with the Mansion House or Messuage thereon erected, lately in the possession of Nathaniel Palmer". It is assumed that this transaction refers to parts of water lots 19 and 20, on which the Redue House sat. In the will of Thomas Ringgold, the younger, who died only four years after his father, he mentions the house in which his Mother lived (the Customs House), "the Counting House or Bath House" and "the Dry Goods Store". It could be assumed that the latter two referred to the stone house which joined Mrs. Ringgold's house, and the Redue House with small connection between the two, all of which appear in the photograph.

The building remained in the possession of the Redue family until advertised for sale in 1886. The ad appeared in the Kent News on July third:

TERMS OF SALE:

The sum of $500 cash on the day of sale: $500 may be left (at the option of the purchaser) as a permanent investment: the balance of purchase money payable twelve months from day of sale, with interest, and to be secured by the bond of the purchaser with approved security to be approved by the undersigned.

Apparently, however, the property was not sold, but was mortgaged to Mary S. Hynson for $500, which mortgage was recorded in 1878. The next recorded transfer of the Redue Property was in 1905. After two transfers in 1908, the property was purchased by Wilbur W. Hubbard, who had previously bought "Widehall" and the "Customs House".

The story related by Mr. Hubbard's son, Wilbur Ross Hubbard, is that his father tore down the Redue House and adjoining stone building while his mother was in Paris establishing Wilbur in a private school. When she returned, she was furious that her husband would have undertaken to destroy the buildings in her absence and build four tenements on the old foundations.
