Description of Property and Eligibility Determination: (Use continuation sheet if necessary and attach map and photo)

This property once served as a large farm, owned and operated by the Beall family. The property has since been converted into a modern greenhouse. Many of the historic agricultural outbuildings have been torn down to make way for numerous modern greenhouses. The property has been owned by the Beall family since the 19th century; however, it is not the best example of a house owned by this family. Other buildings which are owned by the family still exist and are in better condition than this property. The property is therefore not eligible under Criterion A or under Criterion B.

The house is an example of a vernacular center-hall dwelling, which has undergone significant modern alterations. Center-hall dwellings are rectangular houses characterized by a symmetrical organization of rooms on either side of a hallway passing through the center of the house from front to rear. The center passage provides access to the surrounding rooms and usually contains the only exterior doors as well as the stairway to the second floor. One to two-and-one-half stories in height, and one or two rooms deep, the central passage house generally has a side-gable, gambrel, or hipped roof. The house on this property has been altered by modern additions and no longer reflects its historic character. It is currently clad in modern aluminum siding and features modern pane and panel doors. A modern enclosed porch spans the front façade, obscuring the historic details. The house is not a good example of a vernacular farmhouse, as it has lost integrity of both materials and use. The property is therefore not eligible for the National Register under Criterion C. As per the Maryland Historic Trust letter dating May 15, 2001 (appended at end of document) no archaeological concerns were identified at this time. Therefore the property is therefore not eligible under Criterion D.
