Description of Property and Eligibility Determination: (Use continuation sheet if necessary and attach map and photo)

Access to this property was limited. This farm property is set back from the road, making it difficult to obtain many details. The windows and doors on the house were obscured, as were details on many of the outbuildings. The house itself is a vernacular T-plan farmhouse which is arranged as a center hall dwelling and which features multiple modern additions. Center-hall dwellings are rectangular houses characterized by a symmetrical organization of rooms on either side of a hallway passing through the center of the house from front to rear. The center passage provides access to the surrounding rooms and usually contains the only exterior doors as well as the stairway to the second floor. One to two-and-one-half stories in height, and one or two rooms deep, the central passage house generally has a side-gable, gambrel, or hipped roof.

The house on this property features multiple modern alterations which detract from the property's integrity. A one-story enclosed garage is located on the front façade, completely altering the original façade of the house. Two enclosed porches project from the rear of the house. Both are modern additions to the house. Two modern additions are also located on the house, one project from either side of the main structure. All of these modern additions and alterations have resulted in the loss of integrity to the house. The property is therefore not eligible for listing on the National Register under Criterion C.

According to the form prepared for the property in 1974, the house was constructed in many parts, by both the Mullican family and the Watkins family. No significance has been attached to either family in the region. The property is also no longer functioning as a farm. It has therefore lost its integrity of use. The property is therefore not eligible for listing on the National Register under either Criteria A or B. As per the Maryland Historic Trust letter dating May 15, 2001 (appended at end of

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (if known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This house is a small, two-story structure built in several parts to form a "T". The main section is a short, three-bay part that faces south and has a steep center gable with patterned shingles and a small arched window. The front has been obscured by an enclosed, one-story porch. To the rear is a two-story wing with an open balcony. There is a log tobacco house and a frame bank barn on the property.
