The Payne Family House
Peachtree Road, Poolesville vicinity
Private

c. 1913

This two story frame dwelling consists of a principal block of two rooms down and two up with a central stairway and a two story ell attached to the rear length. It was built by a white carpenter and the black landowner Henry Payne, who was assisted by his young daughter. The family was kin to families in other communities in the up-county area and was an example of how kinship linked households in different communities together.

 DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This once handsome two story frame house stands on the slope of a hill looking out towards Peachtree Road. The house is deteriorating and in need of repair. The grounds around the house with its flower beds and shurbbery show that this site was once well cared for when present occupant and owner was younger and in good health.

The structure is a typical, turn of the 20th century, two story frame dwelling, consisting of a principal block of two rooms down and two up, with a central hallway, and a two story ell attached to the rear length. The roof line is crossed by a gable pediment. The southern front room is used today as a bedroom for the occupant, Mrs. Beatrice Jackson, daughter of the Henry Payne who purchased the property in 1908. She is blind, bed-ridden, and can no longer care for the house. The downstairs room in the ell is the kitchen where a wood stove is still in use. Relatives and friends, some of whom live with her, prepare meals for Mrs. Jackson and are responsible for taking care of her.

SPECIFIC DATES c. 1913 BUILDER/ARCHITECT Joyce Stang, Henry Payne, Beatrice Jackson

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Though Mrs. Jackson is blind and infirm, her mind is relatively clear, and she remembers the history of this house. It was purchased in 1908 by her father, Henry Payne, according to deed 208/48, and Mrs. Jackson recalls that she helped her father and a white carpenter named Joyce Stang from Dawsonville to build the house when she was about seventeen years old. Since she was born c. 1896, the house would have been constructed in c. 1913. According to her, her family lived in Poolesville when she was young and later they moved to this property after completing the house.

Her family is related to the Harper families from Jonesville, and she has photographs of them. Her mother was Julie Ann Harper (Payne), born in c. 1855 and daughter of Thomas Harper from Upper Marlboro. She was the sister of Thomas Harper, Jr., who settled in Jonesville and whose house is at the Brookside Nature Center in Wheaton Regional Park. Her father Henry Payne was born in c. 1846. His sister was named Virgie Payne (Thornton). Slides of family photos were taken as part of this survey.
