Warren M.E. Church Cemetery
Martinsburg
Private

1870's, poss.
earlier

This small cemetery may well have been begun in the years soon after emancipation when the Warren M.E. Church was founded near this site. Though most of the older grave stones are unmarked, those that are marked constitute a valuable resource for the history of Black families in upper western Montgomery County.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This cemetery is located on the summit of a hill overlooking the Martinsburg community. Most of the cemetery has grown up now in woods, and the vast majority of the grave stones are no longer visible. According to Lemuel Graham and John Thompson from Martinsburg, this was the burying ground for the older residents of Martinsburg. No one definitely knows when this site was first used as a cemetery, perhaps it was began as a slave and/or free Black cemetery during the antebellum era. The cemetery continues to be used, and some of the descendants have kept up their family plots. Examples were photographed as part of this survey.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

It is not known when this cemetery was first used for burial purposes. Further research of the land records might shed light on its history, such as the date of purchase by the Warren M.E. Church. According to Lemuel Graham, a M.E. church once stood near this cemetery and was moved to the property in Martinsburg where the present church stands. It was moved "before my time" he said, and it was torn down when he was about six or seven, and the present structure built. Thus this cemetery at one time was not alone, but was associated with a church. Since this was the only cemetery in the Martinsburg community used in the "old times", according to Graham, it is possible that this site has a long history as a burial grounds for Blacks, stretching back into the antebellum era, and that the church on this specific site was built after freedom because the site had already been established as a sacred place. This was a pattern that I found as a result of research in rural North Carolina.

When Graham was about eight or ten years old (c. 1902-1904), he said the church purchased additional acreage for the cemetery from Tom Naylor. In recent years, about four or five years ago, more land was acquired for the cemetery from a man named Grant, Graham said. For further information, other older members of the community should be consulted.

The gravestones give important information as to the full names, ages, relationships, and dates of birth and death of family members. This is vital evidence for genealogies. The earliest date of birth on the grave stones examined was that of Tilghman Dorsey, Mary 15, 1845 - November, 1926. Community and research students should be encouraged to record more of these important, vital statistics for family histories.
