9. Description: This three bay by four bay, one and a half story frame church faces northwest. Originally clapboarded, the church recently installed aluminum siding. There is a square bell tower on the northwest elevation, this is capped by a pyramidal roof and surmounted by a cross. There are stained glass lancet windows. The southeast rectangular stained glass window depicts Christ in the Garden of Gethsemane. The gable roof is being recovered. The church was renovated in 1979. Asphalt shingles now cover the roof, and the interior has been altered.

10. Significance: The Boyds Presbyterian Church is an integral part of the village of Boyds, a town which sprang up in response to the coming of the Metropolitan Branch of the B & O Railroad.

This community church was built in the style of rural churches of the era. Like the other buildings in the neighborhood, the church's appearance is much as it was at the turn of the 20th century. It is used both for worship and as a town hall, and to the minister falls the role of leadership, similar to that of mayor in larger communities.

In July, 1876, the trustees of the Presbyterian Church at Boyd's Station dedicated 84 square perches of land to God and the Presbyterian Church. The land, part of "Gum Spring", was purchased from James E. Williams.

For the first few years local ministerial needs were met by a "Stated Supply", a minister with several congregations to serve. The Rev. J.S.H. Henderson of Neelsville and Darnestown Presbyterian Churches was the founding clergyman. In 1888 the church hired its first fulltime pastor, Rev. T. Davis Richards. Rev. Richards left Boyds in 1896, and there was no regular minister for 30 years. In 1928 Rev. James Patterson Kerr served in Boyds, leaving in 1960. Rev. Philip J. Lee followed him, 1962-1967. Rev. Merritt Ednie succeeded Lee in 1969. Mrs. Boyd left a legacy to the church, willing that a manse be built and the remainder invested. Candy Reed - Architectural Description

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Boyds Presbyterian Church is located on the southeast side of White Grounds Road facing northwest. Built on fieldstone foundations which have been reinforced by poured concrete, this clapboarded chapel is undergoing renovation, as the recent addition of white aluminum siding attests.

This is a three bay by four bay structure with a gable roof covered by pressed metal roof. The gable end of the church is perpendicular to the street. The church may be entered through double wooden paneled doors set into the square bell tower which is centered on the northwest (front) elevation. The bell tower is capped by a pyramidal roof and surmounted by a cross. On the northwest side of the church is an exterior stove chimney. There are stained glass lancet windows on the front and side elevations, above the front doors a fixed triangular stained glass window. The south-east (rear) elevation has a nearly rectangular fixed stained glass window depicting Christ in the Garden at Gethsemane.

The stained glass window of Christ is the most dramatic feature of the church's interior and is immediately visible when one enters this simple rectangular church. The plaster walls have tongue and groove wainscott ; up to the window sills. There are carved oak pews and the altar area is furnished by a wooden communion table, altar rail, and square wooden pulpit.

To the east of the church is the graveyard. A row of standing cedars serves to delineate the boundaries of the church property. On the southwest side of the church, about 100' from the church and facing northwest is the rectangular frame, clapboarded Sunday School building. This, too, has a gable roof and its gable end faces the street. This building is now used for starge as a modern, two story brick church school building has been built to the southeast of this structure at the bottom of a gentle hill.

NOTE: In June, 1979, the church trustees completed their renovation. Condition of the building should be considered "excellent". The pressed metal roof was removed and replaced with gray asbestos shingles. A door was cut into the southwest (side) wall to conform to fire department regulations.

The interior walls and ceilings were covered with wallboard and painted white. The wainscotting was removed and replaced with similar material, stained brown. The pews were replaced with folding metal chairs. The altar rail and the front of the pulpit, now decorate the rear wall. The communion table and wooden cross remain. A small portable wooden pulpit completes the altar furnishings.

The Presbyterian Church At Boyd's Station

Twelve acres of adjoining land were bought in 1957, and a Christian Education Building was constructed.⁹ Named Kerr Fellowship Hall, the structure is used on Sundays for Sunday School, and almost continuously throughout the week by the Boyds Day Care Center, Boyds/Clarksburg Historical Society, Civic Association, Federal Credit Union and other groups.
