The Ward Family Cemetery is located on a small lot in a subdivision, on the southeast corner of Botany Way and Rolling Green Way, adjacent to 14728 Botany Way.

The cemetery is in excellent condition. It is surrounded by a recently installed painted metal fence with a padlocked gate. There are approximately a dozen trees within the fence, including two old cedars and an apple tree.

Attached to the east side of the fence next to the gate is a metal plaque which reads:

There are six headstones and several smaller stones which may be footstones; they are lined up on a north-south axis with most of the inscriptions facing east. All of the large stones appear to be in good condition, although parts of the inscriptions are obscured.

Prepare both a summary paragraph of significance and a general statement of history and support.

Summary: The Ward family was active in the Hunting Hill cross-roads community the center of which was located at the intersection of Darnestown and Muddy Branch Roads.

William Ward, a carpenter, lived in a house near the cemetery by 1865 to at least 1879. Ward may have settled here about the time of his second marriage, to Elizabeth A. B., c1849. Ward had six children with his first wife, Verlinda Beall, who died in childbirth in 1848, and four children with his second wife. William died in 1885, followed by Elizabeth who died four years later.

The Ward House, once located near this cemetery, was destroyed by fire in the 1970s. The house included a mid-19th century, three bay I-house form. The doorway had transom, full sidelights, and pediment.<sup>1</sup>

By 1894 Edward G Ward was managing the 125 acre farm. The Wards were active in Hunting Hill which, located on Darnestown Road (Rt. 28) between DuFief Mill Road and Travilah Road, was a thriving, though small, rural community by the late 19th century. The Wards operated the post office and church. Other members of the family were buried in the Ward-Garrett Cemetery (Resource #20/23) located nearby on the former Garrett Farm, now the Washingtonian Country Club.<sup>2</sup>

In 1975, when this resource was still owned by the Ward family, the cemetery was in a brush-filled grove of saplings, surrounded by fields. The original fence was cast iron with arched pickets and a gate decorated with scrollwork and finial.<sup>3</sup> With construction of the Stonebridge Subdivision by 1988, the cemetery was restored by family members.
