Jones/Peter/Muth House

106 North Adams Street

Built: 1825, addition c. 1860, enlargement 1940's Private

The original four-room section of this 1825 house is unique in its construction, using squared, notched logs chinked with a lime and clay plaster. Beaded clapboard is nailed directly over the log frame. Of center hall plan, the entry has elaborate seven light continuous transom and four pane side-light. A colonnaded portico runs the full width of the original front facade, and dates from the early 20th century, but may have been a replacement for an earlier porch. The later addition at the west side made the house L-shaped.

The original Federal-era house was built for the first Baptist minister of Rockville, Joseph H. Jones. Between 1859 and 1930, it was owned by the allied Peter-Dawson family. George Peter was the scion of the powerful family whose number included the first Mayor of Washington, generals and politicians. George Peter served as President of the Maryland Senate while occupying this house.

Some alteration was made to the house in the 1940's, but its current owners are patiently rehabilitating and reconstructing the house to its near original condition. Much of the interior of the 1825 section is original (or compatible replacements) including flooring, stairways, some of the nine-over-six windows and adz-marked log joists in the cellar.

Prepare both a summary paragraph and a general description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

Located on lots 63 and 64 of the original Town of Rockville, this house borders North Adams on its east side, but faces south. The L-shaped building is a vernacular expression of the early 19th century style, mixing Federal and Greek Revival architecture. It has a cross-hall four room main block to which has been added a mid-19th century Victorian wing and a 20th century Classical Revival colonnaded portico. It is a rectangle, of two-stories over brick foundation. Its earliest (1825) section is constructed of hewn, squared logs; its later wing is of frame over stone and brick foundation. The entire house is covered with clapboard. There are interior brick chimneys at both ends of the original house and one interior chimney in the west (Victorian) wing. The gable roof is composition shingle with seamed tin on the porch.

East Elevation

The house closely borders North Adams Street at this elevation which is the narrow bottom of the L-stem and the gable end. The gable roof is slightly splayed at the eaves. It is two bays wide with two nine-over-six shuttered windows on each floor. There is a parged brick bulkhead cellar entrance at ground level on the right side.

South Elevation

The house faces south with its main facade and entrance on this elevation which is the inner side of the "L". The 1825 main block is three bays wide, approximately 50 feet in length. A wing at the west end projects south. A colonnaded portico one step up covers the entire length of this facade. This one story porch has three tapered Doric columns and one engaged pilaster supporting a seamed tin roof. This porch dates from the early 20th century (It is not known whether it replaced an earlier porch, although maps/plats of the house do not show such a porch. See comments at end of description.).

On the second story the center window is in 3 parts; above it is an attic cross gable with an elliptical vent that has hood moulding.

The main entrance is centered in the main block and has a large, paneled wooden door with full architrave. It is topped by a nine-light continuous transom with four-light sidelights. These sidelights are the original 1825 windows and have been covered with a clear glass pane in molded frame for protection.

The beaded clapboard on this facade is the original and is nailed directly to the chinked log frame. The roof and chimneys have been rebuilt/replaced and the left side paired windows are now 12-over-six. The right side windows are nine-over-six replacements, but are of the period and were removed from another period house. The mouldings and framings are original.

West/Southwest Elevation

The two story west wing was added between 1860-1878. The entrance door to this wing is at the end of the portico, and at right angles to the main body of the house. It has a full architrave, although of slightly different width lintel and moulding than the main entrance. This wing was framed with unbeaded clapboard which is now being replaced by beaded wood siding compatible with the extant clapboard on the main block. (continued)

Description - 106 N. Adams Street, Rockville, MD

West Elevation

A brick and stone one-story screened porch with asphalt shingle roof was added to the west wing in the 1940s. The original six-over-six windows with plain moulding are extant on the second floor. At the northwest corner a two-story extension was also added to enlarge the kitchen and extend the upper bedroom.

North Elevation

This facade is approximately 80 feet long with five bays. Its west end is the 1940s projecting extension and has french doors and a wrought iron balcony. Walking east toward Adams Street, the next bay is the end of the 19th century Victorian wing. The main block of the house comprises the next three bays. A porte-cochere is centered over the back entrance, which has a brick stoop with three steps. The porte-cochere is a recent addition; it has three free-standing tapered Doric columns on brick piers and two engaged columns. These columns were custom-milled to match the existing columns on the front portico.

The clapboard siding on this facade is of three different varieties, reflecting the three additions to this house. The original notched log framing with its beaded clapboard is extant, and some of the logs are visible over the back entrance. Between 1880-1930 a one room, 2-story addition was attached to this facade. This addition was removed and moved to the next lot north and served as the basis for the construction of 108 North Adams house. Alteration of the window framing and size and repairs to the framing are evident at this point where the section was removed.

The windows are six-over-one in the Victorian and nine-over-six in the two bay east end. Some shutters remain that are partially paneled with louveres on the upper half.

Interior - Original 1825 House

The 1825 plan is a symmetrical center hall plan with two rooms 20 feet square on each floor. The center hall has eight foot ceilings with plaster walls. The flooring throughout is random width yellow pine. In the entry hall the floor material is of boards salvaged from the two other rooms on this floor; traces of red paint are evident on some of the boards. All flooring on the second level is original.

The stairway is against the right side hall wall. This open string rises over a paneled wall and has square, plain newel post and balustrade.

The four fireplaces in the original section have been enlarged to meet fire codes. The marble mantel in the east room, first floor is a replacement. The other three mantels may be the original ones or compatible replacements, their wooden surrounds and moulding "of the period" and corresponding to door and window moulding.

Description - 106 N. Adams Street - Rockville, MD

The second floor now has a modern bathroom at the head of the stairs. The doors leading from this section to the Victorian wing from the west bedroom are vertical board and batten, as are the closet doors. A narrow stairway leads to the attic, its construction much like the main stairway.

Outbuildings

A modern brick paved driveway enters from Adams Street and runs 90 feet to the outbuilding. This very long building echoes the L-shape of the house. It serves as garage, studio, workshop and office. It was constructed over many stages and is of stone over cinder block. Its most interesting features are its adornments: a pedimented gable-roofed with pilastered and fan-lit garage entrance, Gothic cupola/clock, and Georgian dentiled cornices, an assemblage of "period" ornaments that Mr. Barnes had collected.

Two earlier entrances to the property are marked by a brick step (south of the house on Adams Street) and by two stone pillars with a Chippendale style wooden gate (on the south property line).

The property features many mature locust, walnut, and hickory trees, Chinese holly bushes and other mature trees. There are flowers and shrubs planted in stone circles near the house.

Comments:

1. Two silhouette drawings mapping the town show the house. They are attached, and show the north side annex that was removed. They also show the configuration of the west side wing. Although the 1890 Plat of Beall's Subdivision shows the other porches, it does not show the front portico. However, an earlier portico or smaller porch may have been present in the early 19th century.
2. Wilbur Barnes, who owned the house for thirty years between 1941 and 1973, did much restoration, reconstruction work on the house. He replaced some of the components with compatible ones that he transplanted from period houses in other states. For this reason, it is impossible to determine whether all of the windows, mantels, doors and hardware are original to this site or were removed here from other houses.

Prepare both a summary paragraph of significance and a general statement of history and support.

The house at 106 North Adams Street is a vernacular expression of Federal Period architecture with later mid-19th century Victorian and early 20th Century Classical Revival modifications. This log-framed, clapboard-covered house is the only remaining frame house in Rockville constructed in the 1820s. Its association as the residence for twenty years of the first Baptist minister in town followed by 80 years of ownership by the powerful Peter family, make it a noteworthy part of Rockville's cultural, political and sociological history. Its current owners have been renovating and reconstructing this large house for 10 years; much of the original features and detailing from 1825, as well as the later 1860s addition, are extant.

Upton Beall (Clerk of the Circuit Court for Montgomery County, 1795-1827) began buying contiguous lots bordering the western limits of Williamsburgh (later Rockville) in 1794. He gradually amassed lots numbering 57-68, and in 1812-15 he built his Federal style brick mansion on lots 59 and 60. 106 North Adams lies north of his house on parts of lots 63 & 64 which Beall purchased from the heirs of the Williams family in two separate transactions. Thomas O. Williams sold Beall lots 63 and 67, one acre each, for $60.00 in 1813. Edward O. Williams sold Beall lots 61, 64, 66 & 68 in 1815 for $120.00. Beall would keep lots 63 & 64 until 1825.¹

In 1821, the Baptist Church recognized the organization of a new congregation to be centered in Rockville and called "Bethel Baptist Church". The elders chose 23-year-old Joseph H. Jones as the pastor. Rev. Jones had married Elizabeth Clagett of Montgomery County and settled in Rockville, where he carried out a mercantile trade, including his own trade of silver-plater.² The fledgling group of Baptists purchased land just west of the town limits for a Church and adjoining Cemetery in 1823 (Survey Site 26/10/25).

Rev. Jones purchased the east half of lots 63 & 64 fronting on Adams Street from Upton Beall in 1825 for $110.00.³ While the price paid by Jones was slightly higher than some, but not all, unimproved lots in Rockville at that time, there is no evidence of any structure on these lots at the time of the purchase, nor is an older structure apparent within the house that Jones built.

The main body of the Jones house is a two-story, four-room Federal style house with Greek Revival detailing, framed with hewn, squared logs, notched and chinked with a lime and clay plaster. Over this framework, beaded clapboards were nailed. It is a cross hall plan with two rooms on each floor, with fireplaces rising to interior chimneys, and a cellar located under one room.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

106 N. Adams Street - Rockville, MD

From this house, Rev. Jones served the four churches on his circuit, spending one Sunday each at Upper Seneca, Linganore and Pleasant Valley, in addition to Rockville, a monthly horseback trip of 164 miles.⁴ During his twenty years at Rockville, Rev. Jones' name appears in various documents relating to his pastorate, including notices of weddings that appear in the early newspapers and his part in the formation of the County Bible Society in 1828.

Rev. Jones was also the owner of a 300-acre farm. The 1831 Tax Records value his house on Adams Street, "Parts of lots 63 & 64, improved, ½ acre...$512.50". The 300-acre farm was worth slightly over a dollar an acre, and unimproved. Born at the Adams Street house during the 1830s were two sons, who would achieve prominence: J.H.C. Jones would return to Virginia, the land of his father's family, and become a judge. Spencer C. Jones was born in 1836 and moved away with his family at the age of nine. He would return to Rockville after the Civil War, when he would be elected Town Commissioner and then Mayor, State's Attorney and finally, leader of the Democratic Party in Montgomery County. (Ironically, Mr. Jones was a protege of George Peter, who owned this house from 1859-1893. He split with his political mentor and took over the party leadership after 1889.)⁵

Rev. Jones resigned his Rockville pastorate in 1845 and moved to Frederick, Maryland, but continued to preach at the upper County churches, and during the Civil War he organized the Barnesville Church. Rev. Jones never returned to Rockville, though he held his property here for several years. The Adams Street house was not sold until 1857. From 1858-59, it was owned by Ann Hempstone, widow of George Hempstone. Her trustees sold "the house and lot purchased for the use of Ann Hempstone and Anna V. Hempstone" to Eliza Peter "through her husband George". The price paid was $1,672.00, but for some reason, this 1859 deed was not recorded until after the death of George Peter in 1893.⁶

George Peter (Jr.) was the scion of one of the County's most aristocratic and illustrious families. He was the grandson of Robert Peter, the Georgetown "Merchant Prince", the largest landowner west of Rock Creek and the first Mayor of Washington City (1787). George Peter, Sr. served in the military from 1779 to 1806 and attained the rank of Captain. He volunteered his services without pay in 1813 and continued his distinguished career. Major George Peter was elected to serve in the House of Delegates in 1818 and 1823, the first Democrat to be elected from the heretofore Federalist County. In 1827, Major George Peter sold his Georgetown lands and retired to his Montgomery County estate, Montanverde (Site 24/24); his son George, Jr. was born there in 1829 of his third wife. The Major played an important role in Democratic politics the rest of his life, when his son inherited the mantle of leadership.⁷

After the death of the Major in 1861, George Peter, Jr. began selling much of the extensive Darnestown area estate. One of the advertisements he placed for the sale of the lands states: "finding it impossible to continue farming with other engagements will sell farm and adjoining residence of late Major G. Peter, 360 acres, apple orchard and chestnut timber, 2 miles from C&O Canal, 1½ miles from Seneca Mills."⁸ Another newspaper notice, dated January 5, 1866, states that a Miss Poulson was "Offering limited education of young ladies at the residence of George Peter, Esq., village of Rockville." It is assumed from this that the several young daughters of the Peters were being tutored and other suitable students were sought.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter (called Lavenia) had seven children who reached maturity. The house on Adams Street was enlarged by the addition of a two-story wing at the west end, and a two-story, one bay annex on the north side of the house. This configuration of the house appears on the 1879 Hopkins Atlas (copy attached).

George Peter had a lucrative law practice and was highly respected. In 1867, he was elected Town Commissioner, but declined to serve, instead becoming State's Attorney. He was twice elected State Senator in 1885 and 1887, and in 1887 was elected President of the State Senate.⁹

The Peter children became lawyers and judges, and the daughters each married lawyers, one of whom became a judge. Mary Alice Peter married Thomas Dawson, who became Clerk of the Circuit Court in 1897; the house passed to them in 1909.

The 1910 Tax Assessment valued the Adams Street property at $700, plus $1,500 improvements. The colonnaded portico now running the full 50-foot length of the main body of the house was probably added by the Dawsons in the early 20th century, as it is in the Classical Revival style popular in those years. In addition, the portico does not appear in an 1890 Plat of Beall's Subdivision (attached) in which silhouette drawings of the houses on Adams and Commerce Streets are shown. In the drawing of 106, the north wing has been enlarged and a porch faces Adams Street, and another porch faces north at the end of the west wing.¹⁰

The house passed out of the Peter family with its purchase by Guy Carter in 1930; the land then totalled 1.455 acres. Prior to Mr. Carter's ownership, the Dawson's (Peter heirs) removed the north two-room annex and moved it several feet north to constitute the basis for the house at 108 N. Adams.

Wilbur J. Barnes purchased the property in 1941¹¹ and lived there for 31 years. During that time, he did extensive renovation and reconstruction to the old house. Where possible, he replaced damaged and worn architectural elements with compatible elements "of the period". He transplanted to this house window glass, hardware, fireplace mantles and other materials that he found in old houses in Maryland and Virginia. While many of his reconstructions are "correct", some of the work he did makes it impossible to determine what is original to the 1825 house on this site and what is foreign. Mr. Barnes also enlarged the kitchen and bedroom on the northwest corner and added the west side screened porch. He built a long L-shaped garage, cum studio, office and workshop with dentiled mouldings, gothic cupola, fan-lighted garage door and other multi-period detailings.

The present owners, Lee and Betsy Muth, purchased the house in 1975¹² and have spent ten years in reconstruction and restoration work, including new roof and new beams under the two east rooms to replace the termite-ridden, unfinished log beams. The porte-cochere on the north side has Doric tapered columns constructed to match those on the south side. Much of the house was taken down to the log and stud walls and put up again. Some of the original details (like the horsehair plaster) were not easily duplicated but were reconstructed as near as possible to the original. The Muths have attempted to restore the house where possible, to reconstruct the house where practicable, and to adapt the house for 20th century living while retaining its 19th century character.
