Inventory No. M: 28-39

Name of Property: George Grauel Property

Location: 2901 Spencerville Road, Burtonsville, MD 20866

The George Grauel Property, also known as the Forrest Grauel Property, was previously surveyed in 1998 and was recommended as ineligible for the National Register of Historic Places. A Maryland Inventory of Historic Places addendum dated February 7, 2011 indicates that the property was demolished in the winter of 2010. The property and associated buildings and structures are visible on aerial High Resolution Imagery from 2007-2008 (Maryland Environmental Resources and Land Information Network [MERLIN]). The buildings and structures associated with the property are not visible on National Agricultural Imagery Program (NAIP) imagery from 2009 (MERLIN). Demolition permit #475158 was issued on July 7, 2008 (dataMontgomery).

Prepare both a summary paragraph and a general description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

The George Grauel Property, constructed circa 1930, is a 2½-story Four-square house with a 1-story addition on the south side. The house has a standing seam metal hip roof with a hipped roof dormer on the north side. The house is of wood frame construction with clapboard siding, and it has a formed concrete foundation with wood windows at grade. All other windows in the house are double hung aluminum, with the exception of the north windows on the ground floor, which are wood sash. The house has a 1-story hip roof porch on the north side. The porch has a standing seam metal roof, has three battered wood columns and wood railings, and has formed concrete steps.

There are four outbuildings associated with this property. The first outbuilding is a garage which has a standing seam metal gable roof and is of formed concrete construction. The garage is located southeast of the house. The second outbuilding is a barn which has a flat seam metal gambrel roof and is of wood construction with asbestos siding. The barn is located southeast of the house and south of the garage. The third outbuilding is a shed which has a flat seam metal gambrel roof and is of concrete block construction. The shed is south of the house and northwest of the garage and barn. The fourth outbuilding is also a shed which has a flat seam gambrel roof and is of wood construction with asbestos siding. The shed is southwest of the house, northwest of the garage and barn, and west of the third outbuilding.

The property is located on the south side of Spencerville Road, with residences on the west and east. There are a few trees in the front yard. The land to the south of the buildings is farmland.

buildings within the community did not have indoor plumbing, electricity was a luxury, and the only telephone was in the general store (Daniels). The Great Depression caused much hardship among the area's farmers; farm prices fell drastically and the county could not afford to improve roads, utilities, and schools. Burtonsville did not benefit from the increase in federal employment brought by the New Deal.

In the 1980s, continued growth of federal and private sector employment and the new U.S. 29 highway made Burtonsville accessible to new residents and commercial development. Today Burtonsville retains a rural character. Old working farms still remain, but the area is becoming one of the major suburban centers outside of Washington, D.C.

The George Grauel Property is a Four-square house, which was a type popular in both suburban and rural areas of America from the late 1890s into the 1920s. American Four-square dwellings are usually two to two-and-a-half-stories tall with a simple square or rectangular plan, low-pitched, hipped roof, and a front entrance, usually off-centered, which served as the focal point of the facade. They also commonly featured front and side dormers and a wide one-story front porch. Inside are usually four roughly equal-sized rooms on each floor, with a side stairway. Exterior wall surfaces were generally clad in clapboards or wood shingles. In vernacular examples, the Four-square often featured hipped dormers, a single-story, full-width front porch, and double-hung sash windows.

The development of the Four-square house was part of a stylistic movement known as "Rectilinear" which represented a reaction against the ornate Queen Anne style of the late 1880s. It was part of the same movement which produced the Colonial Revival style which returned to the symmetry of Georgian and Federal designs, and the Prairie School which stressed horizontal lines and intersecting, perpendicular planes. Four-square homes contain some features of both the Colonial Revival and Prairie styles but the style developed independently from them (Wells 1987, 51). Like Colonial Revival houses, Four-square homes emphasize geometric forms, and like Prairie houses they have low-pitched roofs and windows that feature multi-light panels. Yet the Four-square houses also differ from these other styles in significant ways. Unlike Colonial Revival houses, for example, Four-squares do not contain historical features such as Palladian windows, fanlights, and ornamented bracketing. They also often have off-center entrances. Designers of Four-squares also rejected the Prairie School emphasis on horizontal lines and irregular forms.

From the architectural avant-garde, the Four-square form moved to popular builder's magazines, beginning in 1895 when they began publishing drawings of such houses. Companies such as Montgomery Ward and Sears Roebuck included Four-Square variations among the designs for which they offered complete, pre-cut materials shipped ready for assembly (Wells 1987, 53).

8. Significance (Continued)

National Register Evaluation:

Constructed circa 1930, the George Grauel Property is not eligible for the National Register. The property is not eligible under Criterion A; no significant events have been determined to be associated with the property. The property is not eligible under Criterion B; no person significant in local, state, or national history has been determined to be associated with the property. The property is not eligible under Criterion C; the house is a common vernacular style which lacks individual distinction, and the form and massing of the original design have been altered by a 1-story addition on the rear elevation. Finally the property has no known potential to yield important information, and therefore, does not meet Criterion D.
