Description:

The Liberty Grove Church, constructed circa 1860, was previously surveyed by the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission (M-NCPPC) in 1973, 1976, and 1979, and was recommended for designation as a historic site by the M-NCPPC in the Master Plan for Historic Preservation. Since the previous survey the upper portion of the lancet window has been infilled, the belfry is missing its balustrade and it appears that new siding has been installed.

National Register Evaluation:

The Liberty Grove Church, constructed circa 1860, was previously surveyed by the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission (M-NCPPC) and was recommended for designation as a historic site by the M-NCPPC in the Master Plan for Historic Preservation. However, the property is not eligible for the National Register. The church is not eligible under Criterion A; no event or pattern of events significant in local, state, or national history have been determined to have been associated with the church. The church is not eligible under Criterion B; no person significant in local, state or national history has been determined to have been associated with the church. The church is not eligible under Criterion C; the original design of the church has been altered by the construction of a large addition, the installation of replacement windows, and the installation of new siding. These alterations have introduced architectural elements that are out of character with the original design. Finally the property has no known potential to yield important information, and therefore, does not meet Criterion D.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This two bay by three bay, one and a half story church faces north.

Built on fieldstone foundations, the church has white novelty siding. Some time ago the church was converted into the Burtonsville Office Building. A three bay by three bay two story cinderblock addition was constructed at the southeast corner. There is a three story bell tower on the north elevation. It is open at the top and enclosed by a balustraded railing. The tower has a pyramidal roof which is supported by four wooden corner posts with decorative brackets. Five poured concrete steps, flanked by wrought iron hand rails lead to the base of the tower where double glass and wooden paneled doors open into the tower. There is a one and a half story apse on the south elevation. A wooden paneled door leads into the base of the south apse and is shielded by a gabled hood with angle braces. There is a glass and wooden paneled door on the south elevation of the cinderblock addition. This too, is shielded by a gabled hood with angle braces.

There are six over six double hung windows. On the north elevation at the west side, there is a large lancet window with six fixed light sections. The church has a cross gable roof with grey asbestos shingles. The cornice line is boxed and returned.

BUILDER/ARCHITECT Charlie Righter

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Liberty Grove Methodist Church, although much modified over the years, is an example of a rural community church of the mid 19th century.

In the mid-1800s, a small Methodist congregation of farmers and their families gathered in the Burtonsville area for Sunday worship. The congregation was part of the Spencerville Circuit and members would gather on Sunday in a small log house called Frog Pond School to hear a circuit minister. In the early 1860s it was decided that a regular church should be built. The acre of land where the school was located was purchased for $5 from Joseph and Catharine Soper in order "to preach and expound God's only word therein"¹ and in 1863 the corner stone was set. Charlie Righter was the builder of the frame building, a structure that was sometimes called "Frog Pond Church" because of its close proximity to a marsh.

Over the years several changes have taken place in the building. In 1900 fire destroyed a section of the church. Many years later when the cornerstone was removed in order to remove the historical documents stored therein, Liberty Grove members were disappointed to find nothing more than a pile of ashes, a reminder of what took place many years earlier. In 1921 the distinctive belfry and a new vestibule were added, and in 1927 a new wing was constructed.

The congregation grew in size as the 20th century progressed and by the late 1940s new quarters were needed. A new church was built across the street and the old building was used for Sunday school classes. In the mid 1970s, the older church was sold and today has been converted into office space.
