Description of Property and Eligibility Determination: (Use continuation sheet if necessary and attach map and photo)

Structure No. 15078X0 is a 10-foot long concrete slab that spans the Mannehaha Creek in Montgomery County. The structure consists of a single span, an open rail and standard abutments with horizontal scoring. It was built according to the 1933 Standard design; however, the actual date of construction is not known.

The historic context report, Small Structures in Maryland's Roadways, indicates that concrete slabs built between 1912-1933 were the most widely used small structure. Unaltered concrete slab structures built according to the standard plans could be eligible for the National Register under Criteria C if all character-defining elements are present. Although the structure retains the original character defining elements, previous alterations have been made. Those alterations include the addition of metal guardrails on both roadway approaches and a poured concrete retaining wall adjacent to the southeast wingwall along the stream bank. These changes have compromised the integrity of the structure and, therefore, it is not eligible for listing on the ational Register.
