The area includes a large number of simple late nineteenth century houses. Most are small, two bay buildings with gables facing the street and extending back on their narrow, deep lots. The windows are 2/2 double hung sash with wide central muntins. The moulded cornices are returned on the face of the building, one story porches extend across the facades. Some of the houses are double. Several buildings have heavier cornices with central gables and brackets. These are shed-roofed, with two bay facades. California bungalows are interspersed among the houses. There is also a school building of 1920's "Progressive" design with a tower on the facade and large windows.
