DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This group of buildings, formerly associated with a grist and saw milling business, is located on the southeast side of San Mar Road just south of Mt. Lena in Washington County, Maryland. The dwelling is constructed on a slope and faces east.

The house is a three-bay structure built of roughly coursed local limestone. It is one story high at the front elevation, but because it is built into a bank, the west elevation is a full two stories. No decorative work is associated with the masonry. A one-story stone kitchen wing extends to the south (see below).

On both the east and west facades, the fenestration at ground level consists of a central door with a window on either side. The second story of the west facade, which now has three windows, once had a central door as well, as indicated by alterations in the masonry and surviving late 19th century photographs. The original windows have wide frames joined with wooden pegs. All the windows on these two facades have nine-over-six sash and modern louvered shutters.

The main (east) entrance is framed similarly to the windows and includes a four-light transom. The door has six raised panels backed with vertical planks and held to the frame with long strap hinges. Old photographs of the house show the door opposite the front entrance in the second story of the west elevation: this door had no transom and opened onto a small, balustraded deck which also served as a roof over the door below. Some time after the 19th century photograph was made, the upper story door was converted to a window and a three-bay, one-story porch with elaborate gingerbread replaced the smaller entrance porch. The present porch is supported by turned posts trimmed with scroll-cut brackets.

The roof is sheathed with modern asphalt shingles and terminates with barge boards set directly against the end walls. A course of cornice molding finishes the eaves. Brick chimneys are located inside each gable end.

On the interior, the main or upper story of the house is bisected by a stair and entrance hall. Although the stair is placed prominently, it serves no purpose other than to provide access to the attic. Much of the interior woodwork retains what appears to be original paint in dark brown and blue with marbled base boards. North of the hallway is a large parlor room with a fireplace centered in its end wall. The mantel here has a large bead finishing the inner edge, surrounded by a course of diagonal reeding, which is framed by a strip of applied quarter round molding. South of the hallway are two smaller rooms with plainer trim.

In 1976 a stone addition was built to the main house. Constructed of native limestone matching that used in the original building, it is a two-story, gable-roofed extension which faces southeast. From the west facade of the house, its present principal elevation, the gable end of the addition is visible. The angle of its roof is similar to the older house, and window frames and sash match as well. The southeast elevation of the addition, which cannot be seen from the public road or from the front or back of the main house, is very contemporary in design with recessed solar panels fueling the heating system.

The house is in excellent condition and stands on a tract containing 32.67 acres. To the northeast is a large frame bank barn set on fieldstone foundations. A small service kitchen or wash house is located just southeast of the house. It is of frame construction sheathed with board and batten siding and has a large exterior stone chimney at its north end.

A sawmill is said to have been located about 100 yards east of the house, and a large 2½-story grist mill was located west of the dwelling, along the San Mar Road.

The old photograph mentioned above shows a picket fence surrounding the house and an additional outbuilding located to its east.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The complex of structures consists of a stone house, a frame bank barn, and related outbuildings. At one time it also included a grist mill and saw mill. The buildings have contributed much to the agriculture, commerce, and industry in Washington County, Maryland. As a grist milling complex, these buildings served the local agricultural community. The grist mill offered an opportunity for nearby farmers to process grain into more marketable flour and meal. Grist milling was a major industry in Washington County where grain was an important crop and water power was readily available. The house, which appears to have been built during the last decade of the 18th century or the early years of the 19th century, displays regional characteristics of the period as well as some unusual architectural features. Much of its original interior woodwork remains intact, even retaining the original paint in some rooms. The new wing on the house is an example of the compatible contemporary additions that can be made to such vernacular stone farmhouses. The mill on this property, known as "Murray's Mill," was in operation through the 19th century.

The earliest recorded transaction which could be found for this farm was a deed made April 14, 1796, when Jacob Woolfkill purchased 176 1/2 acres of "Resurvey on Manheim" from Joseph Bowman at a cost of £4.10s per acre (0/420). Woolfkill's will was probated October 16, 1824, at which time the plantation on which he had lived was given to his three children, John and Jacob Woolfkill and Polly Seyster, wife of Michael Seyster (Will 253). Shortly thereafter, John and Jacob sold 58-3/4 acres, presumably a portion of their share of the estate, to Michael Seyster. This transaction included water rights for a mill (HH/1092). In 1833 Michael Seyster and his wife sold the 58-3/4 acres to John Fouch who, in turn, sold them to John Murray and William Melavery of Franklin County, Pennsylvania in 1839 (00/271, UU/45). By 1868 the property was in the possession of Susan Emmert, widow of Andrew Emmert, when it was purchased by Jacob Bishop (LBN2/689). From Bishop the property descended to Katie Ruch who sold it to Jennie G. Ridenour and John L. Ridenour in 1904 (135/528). It remained in the Ridenour family until 1968 when it was purchased by the present owners (199/531, 199/533, 480/471).
