DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (if known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE
The entrance to Belvoir is on the east side of Maryland Route 178, approximately half way between Crownsville and the intersection of the south end of Old River Road and Maryland Route 178. The house is at the east side of a 0.5 mile private lane. The architectural evolution of Belvoir illustrates the development of an early Maryland manor-type house of the late seventeenth century into a mid-eighteenth-century house. The early section with its unsophisticated stonework, and probable wooden chimney, was incorporated into an early Georgian gambrel-roof. This, in turn, was raised, expanded and remodeled into a mid-Georgian structure. The brick-block, as it stands (1970), is an example of mid-eighteenth-century Maryland architecture; meanwhile the whole house shows constructional changes and growth and reflects the stylistic changes imposed by its successive owners. Belvoir, high above the Severn River, is a two-story house built in the shape of a "squat T." The shank of the "T" is the earlier part and is a steep gambrel-roof structure, built of fieldstone with a Flemish bond brick end-wall and exterior chimney. Both brick-end and fieldstone have a slightly projecting water table. The four windows in the end wall have segmental brick arches. There are two peaked dormers on each side of the roof. The main portion of the house is all brick and incorporates that part of the earlier section which extends into the top of the "T". The bonding on the first story is English, while it is Flemish above the belt course. The second story has been added. The brickwork also shows that the south section was added after the central portion; this is pointed to by the chimneys in each portion of the brick part. The older one is chunkier and more massive and at one time was partially an exterior chimney. The entrance porch is similar to that at Gunston Hall, Lorton, Virginia, with its English Baroque pediment with four columns and four pilasters. Resting on a c. 1920 base, the porch may be of that vintage. In 1920 a wooden, gambrel-roof wing was added at the west end. The cellar ceiling has been lowered and there are early fieldstone foundations. The interior radiates from an almost square central hallway which runs the width of the brick section which is actually part of earlier house. The staircase ascends the south wall, turning back at a landing at the level of the middle of the entrance hall window thus making it a probably later addition. There is a room on either side of the entrance hall. Each is the width of the house and the room to the south is in the older section. (see continuation sheet)

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Belvoir's illustrious history includes General Rochambeau, Francis Scott Key, John Ross, Dr. Upton Scott, Colonel Maynadier and the Marquis de Lafayette; the Worthingtons, Fitzhughs and the Lees; the long-gone Baltimore newspaper the Federal Republican and a well-known contemporary (1970) Maryland architectural planner.

Jean Baptiste Donatien de Vimeur, Comte de Rochambeau (1725-1807), the famous general in the French Army, camped with his troops at Belvoir on September 16 and 17, 1781. The army was en route to join George Washington in Yorktown, Virginia, for the final campaign of the American Revolution.

Francis Scott Key, the author of "The Star-Spangled Banner," visited Belvoir in 1789, while a student at St. John's College, Annapolis. Belvoir was the home of his great-grandfather, John Ross (c. 1695-1766), Clerk of the Governor's Council.

Ann Arnold Ross Key, grandmother of Francis Scott Key, and his aunt, Elizabeth Ross Key Maynadier, are buried in the graveyard at Belvoir. The Maryland Chapter of the Colonial Dames have preserved these tombstones.

John Ross (c. 1695-1766) was the Clerk of the Governor's Council from 1729 until 1764, Deputy Agent for the Sixth Lord Baltimore, and an alderman for the city of Annapolis. In 1732 Richard Lewis, a Maryland schoolmaster, composed a poem which consoled John Ross for the loss of Governor Benedict Leonard Calvert.

In the mid 1730's John Ross began buying large tracts of land surrounding the gambrel-roof 1690 house (in 1970 it is a wing of Belvoir). That portion forms the shank of the 1970 "T" shaped structure. Ross' principal land purchases for 1735 to 1736 included tracts patented during 1662-1663 to Nicholas Wyatt (-1673), a 1649 emigrant from Virginia and a prominent Anne Arundel County Quaker.

#7. DESCRIPTION continued

Window frames and door frames were re-styled in the Greek-Revival manner, and have fluted moldings and corner rosettes; the fireplace mantels are late eighteenth, or early nineteenth century.

The builder of the earlier wing (which has a gambrel roof) is unknown due to the dearth of source material in order to precisely locate that portion of the seventeenth-century land patent on which the 1690 house is located.

John Ross had two daughters, Elizabeth, who married Dr. Upton Scott of Annapolis, and Ann Arnold Ross, the wife of Francis Key, the grandfather of Francis Scott Key, the latter named for his great-uncle Upton Scott.

In 1766 John Ross died and his blind widow remained at Belvoir. Her granddaughter, Elizabeth Key, daughter of Ann (Ross) and Francis Key, was married in June 1781, three months before the French General, Comte de Rochambeau's arrival at Belvoir, to Colonel Maynadier, surgeon's mate in the Continental Army. At the Battle of Brandywine (Pa.) he extracted a bullet from the leg of the Marquis de Lafayette. When Lafayette visited

Annapolis on December 17, 1824, Maynadier was one of the countians who received him.

The Maynadiers and Mrs. Ross were living at Belvoir in 1789 when Mrs. Elizabeth Ross Scott brought her great-nephew, Francis Scott Key, a student at St. John's, to Belvoir to see his great-grandmother. Mrs. Ross continued to hold title to Belvoir; the Maynadiers continued to live with her, as attested in a note dated "Belvoir Nov. 28, 1805". Reputedly in Maynadier's handwriting, it is the earliest recorded "Belvoir" name.

Colonel Maynadier held hunts at Belvoir. On one such occasion, legend has it Brice John Worthington (1764-1837) of Summer Hill, Crownsville, met Ann Lee Fitzhugh whom he married in 1809 at Belvoir. Seven years later Worthington purchased land held by John Ross' heirs including Belvoir although he continued to reside at Summer Hill. Worthington's nineteenth-century land holdings were resurveyed in 1829 to become Worthington's Resurvey of which Belvoir was a portion.

Brice John Worthington (1764-1837), an ardent Federalist, was a member of the Maryland Legislature as were his father Nicholas Worthington (1734-1793), his grandfather Thomas Worthington (1691-1753) and his great-grandfather Captain John Worthington (c. 1650-1701). Worthington went to Washington to be with Samuel Chase during the impeachment of the Associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court, one of the four Maryland signers of the Declaration of Independence and a Federalist (1806) during Thomas Jefferson's presidency.

Worthington's Federalist sentiments appeared again in 1812 when he sheltered a group of unpopular Federalists whose Baltimore newspaper, the Federal Republican, had been destroyed by a mob. The Federalists had dared to go against popular opinion and to criticize America's entrance in the War of 1812.

After Worthington's death in 1837, Lot Number 1 containing "the Building at Bellevoir" was devised to his son George Fitzhugh Worthington. In 1852 Belvoir passed out of the Worthington family; the house had a succession of owners, including Casimir Poluyanski, a Roman Catholic priest who sold Belvoir to William Coleman Rogers, father of the (1970) owner.
