DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (if known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

Brooklandwood is located 1.7 miles north of Interchange 23 of the Baltimore Beltway on the west side of Falls Road, on the grounds of St. Paul's School for Boys.

The five-bay, two-and-a-half-story central block and two later wings are brick, painted white. The central-block section is original and has appropriate porches and Palladian-style windows forming a symmetrical, functional unit in an otherwise modern boarding school complex.

The central block, original 'A' roof, running east-west, dormers, long porches and two second-story level Palladian-style windows are on the north and south elevations respectively. These facades are symmetrical but lack duplication by omission, on the north elevation, of a pediment similar to that on the south elevation. There is no pediment on the north elevation.

Two, two-story, 35' long, brick wings, attached to the east and west ends respectively, were added at an early date to the central block.

The tax assessment book for Baltimore County from the Federal Direct Tax of 1798 states that Brooklandwood, that year, measured 37' x 57', representing similar dimensions of the central block of 1970.

The central block contained three original rooms opening into a center room the north end of which was an octagonal bay now absorbed into the north elevation expansion.

The shutters and screened-in porch on the south facade, having been removed (1970), brings the house close to its mid-nineteenth century appearance.

Mr. Orin M. Bullock, Jr., FAIA, Baltimore, Maryland, is the 1970 restoration architect for Brooklandwood.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Brooklandwood, built in the mid-1790's, has, during its long history, been associated with affluent Baltimoreans: Charles Carroll of Carrollton, signer of the Declaration of Independence, George Brown, banker, of Alexander Brown & Sons, and Isaac Emerson, the inventor of Bromo-seltzer. Of the notables who have owned the house, Charles Carroll (1737-1832) holds the most scholarly place in having the most political and historical eminence. He is followed by the later owner, Isaac Emerson, whose invention of Bromo-seltzer holds eminence in the field of international gastronomic eloquence. The highly respected financier, George Brown was a third owner; who, as son of the founder and as the second head of the respected banking firm of Alexander Brown and Sons, guided the firm that has been, and is still, responsible for the affluence of many wealthy Baltimoreans.

Carroll is remembered as a signer of the Declaration of Independence, member of the Continental Congress, Maryland's first United States Senator and an ardent Federalist. He dispersed a considerable portion of his fortune in supporting and providing homes for his children.

Brooklandwood is but one example of the houses he provided for his offspring. By 1790 Carroll had purchased over 400 acres in Baltimore County for a country home for his daughter Mary Carroll Caton (1770-1846), wife of Richard Caton (1763-1845), in order to replace their "Castle Thunder" estate situated where Richard Caton laid out, in 1810, the town of Catonsville

By 1793 the Catons had moved to Brooklandwood, their country house. Carroll, who in his later life made his residence with the Catons at their townhouse at Lombard and Front Streets, Baltimore, the Carroll Mansion, also spent time with the family at Brooklandwood.

Mary Caton, the wife of Richard Caton, and the daughter of Charles Carroll, was the mother of three daughters reknowned as beautiful women in their era and social world; these daughters married titled persons and became, respectively:

#8. SIGNIFICANCE

Marchioness of Wellesley, Baroness of Strafford, and Duchess of Leeds. One of Mrs. Caton's visits to her daughters was recorded in an 1830 letter from Queen Adelaide, consort of King William of England, the Marchioness of Wellesley.

Through the death of Charles Carroll (1832), Mary Caton inherited Brooklandwood from her father, and sold it fourteen years later (1846) to George Brown (1787-1859) of Alexander Brown & Sons, a banking house "...founded in 1800, and the oldest private banking house not only in the United States but the whole of North America,..." The Story of Alexander Brown and Sons, 18. This should not be confused with corporate banks, e.g. the Bank of New York (1792). Brown's father, Alexander Brown (1764-1834), founded the banking firm which George Brown administered after his father's death. In addition to banking, George Brown was instrumental in the creation (1827) of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad (financed by Alexander Brown & Sons); became the B & O's first treasurer; involved himself in significant early nineteenth century Baltimore philanthropic projects such as the House of Refuge and the Peabody Institute. Brooklandwood remained in the hands of the Brown family until 1916 when Isaac Edward Emerson purchased the estate.

Emerson, born in Chapel Hill, North Carolina, was educated as a chemist at the University of North Carolina and made a fortune by inventing Bromo-seltzer and marketing it through the Emerson Drug Company. The Bromo-seltzer Tower in Baltimore City is dedicated to Isaac Emerson.

"Emerson's Farm" was a place for motorists to visit in the 1920's and 30's, when his dairy herd of pure-bred Guernsey cattle provided the raw material for a retail milk and ice cream outlet on the premises. In the break-up of the property, the Emerson barn served many years as a summer theatre, The Hilltop, and in 1976 a project was begun to convert the Emerson silos into a Montessorri school.
