program only added to the rawness." The local setting has continuously evolved with late twentieth century strip malls and franchises replacing the "truck stops and filling stations" described circa 1940.

This property is not eligible for the National Register. Although the building became a crime scene in 1994 when robbers drove a tank through the front of the store and held hostages, the resource lacks significance related to events, persons, or architecture. Criterion D, information potential, was not assessed for this study.
