

PRINCE GEORGE'S COUNTY
HISTORIC SITE SUMMARY SHEET

Survey #: P.G. #71A-17 Building Date: 1909, 1936

Building Name: Feagens-Schneider House and Store

Location: 5506 Church Road, Mitchellville, Maryland

Private/Residence/Occupied/Good/Inaccessible

Description

The Feagens-Schneider House and Store fronts directly on the old road from Collington to St. Barnabas Church at Leeland. It is now surrounded by later additions and is scarcely recognizable as a store building. The store itself is a one-and-one-half story front-gabled frame building, its principal facade being its one-bay south gable end. It has a standing-seam tin roof; there are two interior brick chimneys. Foundations appear to be concrete, and the siding is covered with aluminum. A two-story gable-roofed dwelling house is attached at right angles to the store, with its two-bay south facade flush with the south gable end of the store. There is a one-story enclosed porch running across the south facade of both sections. The dwelling house is two-bays by one-bay; windows are 6/6 double hung sash, and have black louvered shutters. The foundations are concrete, the roof is covered with green asphalt shingle, and the siding is aluminum. There are small shed-roof additions to the north and to the west.

Significance:

The Feagens-Schneider House and Store is a typical vernacular front-gabled store building attached to an earlier frame dwelling. There was a store at this location in the post-Civil War period, owned and operated by Joshua T. Clarke. In the 1870's, after the construction of the Baltimore and Potomac Railroad through Collington, he built a small store and several dwellings west of the railroad line, fronting on the old road which connected St. Barnabas Church with the Forest Chapel (Holy Trinity). (Clarke had in earlier years operated another store to the north, near his home farm at Clarke's Fancy; cf. #71A-5.) One of his sons, Dr. Charles Clarke, farmed and practiced medicine on adjoining property in Collington. Like many other Prince George's County farmers, Clarke became seriously indebted in the 1880's, and suits in Equity Court were brought against him. His three Collington farms were offered at sale, and purchased by his son, Joshua Jr., who was at that time operating the Collington store. In 1889, Joshua T. Clarke, Jr., sold the store and the 184-acre farm on which it stood to Samuel McCann, who continued to operate the store. By the turn of the century, the store ceased to operate, and in 1909, McCann sold 31-1/2 acres to William Feagens. Within a year, the Feagens constructed a small dwelling which probably survives as the easterly section of the present building. In 1929 the 31-1/2 acre property was sold to Charles Schneider, who opened a small country store in the dwelling, and in 1936 built the front-gabled store attached on the west. The present owners acquired the property in 1969. In the last decade, they have undertaken renovation work, which has included installation of aluminum siding, and removal of the cornice returns on the front-gabled store building. The resulting complex building is attractively maintained, but it gives little hint of its historic past.

The Feagens-Schneider House and Store is a typical vernacular front-gabled store building attached to an earlier frame dwelling.

There was a store at this location in the post-Civil War period, owned and operated by Joshua T. Clarke. Clarke's land consisted of three small farms amounting to 400 acres in the Collington area; in the 1870's, after the construction of the Baltimore and Potomac Railroad through Collington, he built a small store and several dwellings west of the railroad line, fronting on the old road which connected St. Barnabas Church with the Forest Chapel (Holy Trinity). (Clarke had in earlier years operated another store to the north, near his home farm at Clarke's Fancy; cf. #71A-5.) One of his sons, Dr. Charles Clarke, farmed and practiced medicine on adjoining property in Collington.<sup>1</sup>

Like many other Prince George's County farmers, Clarke became seriously indebted in the 1880's, and suits in Equity Court were brought against him. His three Collington farms were offered at sale, and purchased by his son, Joshua Jr., who was at that time operating the Collington store. In 1889, Joshua T. Clarke, Jr., sold the store and the 184-acre farm on which it stood to Samuel McCann.<sup>2</sup>

No record has yet been discovered of what happened to Clarke's store, but by the turn of the century, the store was no longer operating. In 1909, a 31-1/2 acre portion of the Clarke-McCann farm (which bordered the old road on both east and west) was sold to William and Florida Feagens; within the year, they had added a small dwelling. It is probably this small frame dwelling which survives as the easterly section of the present building.<sup>3</sup> In 1927, after her husbands' death, Mrs. Feagens sold an adjoining acre of her land to the Board of Education for the construction of the new Collington School,<sup>4</sup> and in 1929 the 31-1/2 acre property was sold to Charles Schneider. The Schneiders opened a small country store in part of their dwelling, and in 1936 built the front-gabled store attached on the west. For several years this small country store served the local Collington population.<sup>5</sup>

The property has changed hands several times since 1947, and several small additions have been constructed on the building.
