

PRINCE GEORGE'S COUNTY
HISTORIC SITE SUMMARY SHEET

Survey #: P.G.# 72-9-36 Building Date: 1928

Building Name: Doswell Brooks House

Location: 6107 Foote Avenue, Fairmount Heights, Md.

Private/Residence/Occupied/Good/Inaccessible

Description:

The Doswell Brooks House is a one-and-one-half-story frame bungalow with hip roof. It is three bays by three, with entrance in the center bay of main north(east) facade. This main facade is sheltered by a porch (now screened) covered by a roof integral with that of the main house. Centered in the north plane of the roof is a small hip-roof dormer which encloses two shallow three-light windows. The original wood siding of the house is now sheathed with yellow synthetic siding, and the roof is covered with gray asbestos shingle. There is a brick chimney at the ridge of the hip roof, near the rear of the building. The house stands on a high basement of molded concrete block.

Significance:

The Doswell Brooks House is representative of the small bungalows which were being built in the developing suburbs of the 1920s. It was built in 1928 on a lot in the Mount Wiessner subdivision. The Brooks House was built for Doswell E. and C. Anita Brooks in 1928, after they bought unimproved lot 8 in the Mount Wiessner subdivision of Fairmount Heights. Doswell Brooks was very active in Prince George's County Public Schools; he served as Supervisor of Colored Schools for the County beginning in 1922, and in 1956 was appointed as the first black member of the Board of Education. He also served as a member of the Fairmount Heights town council, and as Mayor from 1955 until shortly before his death in 1968. This bungalow remained the home of Doswell Brooks' widow for nearly 20 years after his death. Although altered by the installation of siding and the screen-enclosure of the porch, it is a representative example of the small bungalows which were being built in the County's suburbs of the 1920s.

Acreage: 6,250 square feet

Prepare both a summary paragraph of significance and a general statement of history and support.

The Doswell Brooks House is representative of the small bungalows which were being built in the developing suburbs of the 1920s. It was built in 1928 on a lot in the Mount Wiessner subdivision.

The Town of Fairmount Heights is located just outside the easternmost point of the District of Columbia in Prince George's County, Maryland; it is composed of a group of early twentieth-century subdivisions that form one of the earliest planned communities for blacks in the Washington, D. C., area. The community began with the Fairmount Heights subdivision in 1900, followed by five adjoining subdivisions, the last being Sylvan Vista platted in 1923. The Town was incorporated in 1935, and grew steadily through the years before World War II.

The land which was to become Fairmount Heights consisted, during the late nineteenth century, principally of parts of the small farms of John H. Wilson, John and Caroline Silence, Samuel Hoover, Mosby Brown and John Wiessner, all clustered around the east corner of the District of Columbia. In the early years of the twentieth century, these farms were bought up and subdivided by land speculators, who then began to sell individual lots to black families, most of whom worked in the District of Columbia.

The first section of Fairmount Heights was subdivided in 1900 by Robinson White and Allen Clark (both white men) out of parts of several small farms which they had purchased from the Wilson, Godfrey, Belt and Lee families. White and Clark had approximately fifty acres surveyed by County Surveyor Edward L. Latimer, and laid out in lots and streets radiating from the northeast boundary of the District of Columbia. The deep, narrow lots were generally 25 by 125 feet; two of the streets were named for these first two developers. Sale of lots began almost immediately, and within a few years, dwellings were constructed and a community began to form.

In 1909, Mount Wiessner, which consisted of 6.5 acres of John C. Wiessner's farmland, was platted by his heirs. This subdivision added a section of larger (generally 50 by 125 feet) residential lots at the southeast end of the original Fairmount Heights subdivision.

From the beginning, blacks were encouraged to buy lots and settle in the new community. White and Clark sold the lots at relatively low prices, making home ownership finally attainable for black families. Most of the earliest purchasers of lots worked for government agencies; many built their own houses, or relied on friends and family to help with construction. Many families were quick to seize the opportunity to move out of the city, determined to progress, by hard work and amid healthful surroundings, toward a better life.

The earliest dwellings were of frame construction, modest in size and form, and many of these have not survived. Within a few years, however, several interesting and substantial houses were constructed for individuals who would make significant contributions to the development of Fairmount Heights.

The Brooks House was built for Doswell E. and C. Anita Brooks in 1928, after they bought unimproved lot 8 in the Mount Wiessner subdivision of Fairmount Heights. Doswell Brooks was very active in Prince George's County Public Schools; he served as Supervisor of Colored Schools for the County beginning in 1922, and in 1956 was appointed as the first black member of the Board of Education. He also served as a member of the Fairmount Heights town council, and as Mayor from 1955 until shortly before his death in 1968.

This bungalow remained the home of Doswell Brooks' widow for nearly 20 years after his death. Although altered by the installation of siding and the screen-enclosure of the porch, it is a representative example of the small bungalows which were being built in the County's suburbs of the 1920s.
