Description of Property and Eligibility Determination (Use continuation sheet if necessary and attach map and photo)

The one-and-a-half story brick and siding house is designed in the Cape Cod type of the Colonial Revival style. There are two front gable dormers projecting from the side-gable roof. The main entrance is located in an one-story addition that projects from the main elevation.

The rear of the house faces what was once known as Old Mitchellville Road. A recent subdivision has been built to the north and Old Mitchellville Road has been closed within the subdivision. The road had once continued through to access this property.

The States Road Commission began construction of the Robert Crain Highway (later US 301) in 1922. Crain Highway was designed to link southern Maryland's rural areas to northern Maryland's urban areas. With the introduction of a better road system, limited development was allowed to flourish along the corridors and within the rural areas of southern Maryland. The population of Prince George's County increased from 60,000 to 90,000 inhabitants between 1930 and 1940. When the Nice Memorial Bridge was completed in 1940 and linked the Virginia side of the Potomac to the Maryland side in Charles County, Crain Highway served as a bypass between Florida and New York. Crain Highway was widened in 1950 to handle the increase in traffic.

The c.1940 house is not eligible for the National Register. While it is typical of the modest residential development along Crain Highway, the resource lacks significance related to events, persons, or architecture. Criterion D, information potential, was not assessed for this study.
