

PRINCE GEORGE'S COUNTY
HISTORIC SITE SUMMARY SHEET

Survey #: P.G. #74B-8 Building Date: 1901

Building Name: Queen Anne Schoolhouse (#1)

Location: 17800 Queen Anne Bridge Road, Mitchellville, Maryland

Private/Residence/Occupied/Good/Inaccessible

Description

The Queen Anne Schoolhouse stands on a high rise of ground on the north side of the Mitchellville to Queen Anne Road. It is a one-story frame gabled-roof building, ca. 40 by 25 feet, its principal facade being its south gable end. Entrance is through a door centered in this south gable end, accessible by a modern wooden deck. On each side of the central door is a 6/6 double-hung-sash window. The sides of the building are two bays long. A rear shed roof addition was constructed on the north gable end in the early 1970's; it has entrance into its west elevation. Original German siding is now covered with a stained plywood cladding which covers the original door and window surrounds; plain board surrounds are currently being installed. The roof is covered with standing seam metal, and there are two small brick stove chimneys at the ridge. The building rests on a high brick foundation. The one-room interior has been partitioned and converted into a four-room dwelling.

Significance

The Queen Anne Schoolhouse is an example of the rural early-twentieth-century schoolhouses in Prince George's County. It was built to replace the old school (#1) which had stood about one mile to the west at Newton Hill. In January 1901, the school trustees purchased .98 acre on the Queen Anne Road, and the school opened later that year. Like its predecessor, it was known as School #1 in the Queen Anne District; it served as the primary school for the white children of the Queen Anne area. Typical of the primary schools of its day, it educated children from first through sixth level in one room. It operated for less than twenty years, and was closed and sold in 1920. Since that time it has been used as a tenant house associated with the large adjoining farm property. The new owners have renovated the interior, and the current tenants are finishing the exterior work. The building no longer embodies the distinctive characteristics of this rural early-twentieth-century schoolhouse type.

The Queen Anne Schoolhouse (#1) stands on a high rise of ground on the north side of the Mitchellville to Queen Anne Road. It is a one-story frame gable-roof building, two bays long, ca. 40' by 25' feet; its principal facade is its south gable end.

The building rests on a high brick foundation, and stands on sloping ground so that the foundation is higher at the south end, and encloses at that end a small basement space. Entrance is through a door centered in the south gable end, accessible by a new wooden deck.

In the early 1970's a shed addition was built onto the rear (north) gable end of the schoolhouse, adding a small entry space and an extra room. Entrance to this addition is through a door in its west elevation. The door is flanked by two small modern 6/6 windows, one of which has been cut into the main block. The original windows of the schoolhouse, also 6/6, are considerably longer than these two modern windows.

The original German siding was until recently covered with asphalt shingle painted green. It is now covered with stained plywood cladding which has a vertical pattern. This new siding covers the original door and window surrounds; new plain board surrounds are currently being installed. The gable roof is covered with standing seam metal.

The building has, since it was closed as a schoolhouse in 1920, been converted into a small residence: four rooms in the main block, and one other in the rear shed addition. New partitions and sheet rock walls now separate the spaces. Most original molded interior surrounds of doors and windows have been retained, but the interior walls have a modern appearance.

The building stands in a high and prominent position overlooking the intersection of Mill Branch and Queen Anne Bridge Roads.

The Queen Anne Schoolhouse (#1) is an example of the early-twentieth century schoolhouses in Prince George's County. It was built in 1901 to replace the old schoolhouse (#1) which had stood about one mile to the west at Newton Hill. In June of 1900, in response to a petition by the community to change the site of the school, a committee was appointed by the Board of School Commissioners to arrange for the removal of the old school #1; in October of the same year, the committee was authorized to purchase a school lot closer to Queen Anne. The following January, the trustees purchased .98 acres on the Queen Anne Road; the new school opened that year and was known, like its predecessor, as School #1 in the Queen Anne District.¹

The new Queen Anne school served as the primary school for the white children from the Queen Anne area. Typical of schools of its day, it educated children from first through sixth level in one room. It operated for less than twenty years, and was closed and sold in 1920.² Since that time it has been used as a tenant house associated with the large adjoining farm property. The new owners have renovated the interior, and the current tenants are presently finishing the exterior work.³

The Queen Anne Schoolhouse recalls by its shape the typical rural early twentieth century schoolhouses of the County, but the new siding and the front deck have significantly altered its appearance. A much better example of the same type of school building is Silesia School (#80-12), a designated Historic Site. Silesia School was built in 1902, and was converted into a residence after the school closed in 1925. The interior of the Silesia School has also been divided into four living spaces, but its exterior retains nearly all of its original features.⁴ The Queen Anne Schoolhouse no longer embodies the distinctive characteristics of the County's rural schoolhouses.
