

CAPSULE SUMMARYPG: 76B-072*Edgar W. Grimes House*6015 Old Branch Avenue*Temple Hills, Prince George's County, Maryland*c. 1900*Private

The Edgar W. Grimes House was constructed c. 1900 at 6015 Old Branch Avenue in Temple Hills near the unincorporated community of Camp Springs, Maryland. Edgar W. Grimes, a blacksmith owned the property from 1896 until 1911 before conveying the property to Guy H. Trueman. A grocer and real estate speculator, Trueman and his wife Cora R. Trueman (nee Grimes) contributed to the suburbanization of the Camp Springs area with the platting of "Trueman Heights" in 1953. The property stayed in the Trueman family until 2004. At this time, Guy H. Trueman, Jr., conveyed the property to Apex Heap, L.L.C., the current owner. The vernacular dwelling is representative of many of the original structures built during the early-twentieth-century along the burgeoning Old Branch Avenue suburban corridor. The Edgar W. Grimes House is an example of a domestic building type constructed in rural Prince George's County in the early 1900s exhibiting influences of popular suburban forms and styles. The building retains sufficient integrity to illustrate its original construction techniques, stylistic influences, and its significance as a single-family vernacular dwelling constructed at the beginning of the twentieth century in a section of Prince George's County transforming from rural to residential.

The Edgar W. Grimes House is a two-story, three-bay single-family dwelling with an L-shaped form. The main block, which has an I-house form, is augmented by a two-story rear ell. Based on its form and materials, it appears that this dwelling was constructed circa 1900. Vernacular, the dwelling borrows stylistic influences from other forms and styles such as the bungalow-inspired front porch and center-gable pediment.

Set on a solid foundation with a parge coat, the wood-frame structure has been re clad in aluminum siding. Asphalt shingles cover the side-gable roof, which is finished with overhanging eaves and cornice returns. Vinyl siding, resembling board-and-batten, clads the upper gable ends as well as the center-gable pediment across the façade. Located in the center bay of the façade, the single-leaf main entry holds a paneled wood door. Window openings hold 6/6 wood sash set in narrow, square-edge wood surrounds. The front porch design was influenced by the early-twentieth-century popularity of the bungalow form and the advent of rock-faced concrete block. Rock-faced concrete block piers feature molded caps on which are set battered wood posts. The one-story, four-bay porch has a half-hipped roof of asphalt shingles resting on the pier support system. Lattice has been placed over the square wood balusters. Additional alterations include the application of diagonal wood planks to infill the foundation.

Prepare both a one paragraph summary and a comprehensive description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

The Edgar W. Grimes House is located at 6015 Old Branch Avenue in Temple Hills, Maryland. Situated on the west side of Old Branch Avenue, the dwelling has a setback of approximately fifty feet. The level, grassy lot includes a circular gravel driveway and concrete walkways. A dense stand of trees and shrubs is located at the southern end of the property. The western boundary is highlighted by a line of mature hardwoods and pine trees. There are no secondary resources associated with this property.

DWELLING

The Edgar W. Grimes House is a two-story, three-bay, vernacular single-family dwelling with an L-shaped form. The main block, which has an I-house form, is augmented by a two-story rear ell. Based on its form and materials, it appears that this dwelling was constructed circa 1900.

Set on a solid foundation with a parge coat, the wood-frame structure has been reclad in aluminum siding. Asphalt shingles cover the side-gable roof, which is finished with overhanging eaves and cornice returns. Vinyl siding, resembling board-and-batten, clads the upper gable ends as well as the center-gable pediment across the façade (east elevation).

Located in the center bay of the façade, the single-leaf main entry holds a paneled wood door with semi-circular light. A wooden storm door with decorative scroll work shelters the door. Window openings on the façade hold 6/6 wood sash set in narrow, square-edge wood surrounds. The front porch design, with its rock-faced concrete block piers, is similar to a Craftsman-style porch. Rock-faced concrete block pedestals feature molded caps on which are set battered wood piers. The one-story, four-bay porch has a half-hipped roof of asphalt shingles resting on the pier support system. Lattice has been placed over the square wood balusters. Additional alterations include the application of diagonal wood planks to infill the foundation.

Fenestration of the north and south (side) elevations is limited to 6/6 wood-sash windows on the first and second stories. Whereas the openings on the south elevation are centered, the north elevation's openings are justified to the west. Basement window openings have been covered with plywood from the exterior. There are no openings in the upper gable ends.

The two-story rear ell extends two-bays to the west. Set on a solid parged foundation, this wood-frame structure has also been reclad in aluminum siding. The front-gable roof of asphalt shingles has the same overhanging eaves and cornice returns found on the main block. An interior-side brick chimney with parged cap pierces the northern slope. Fenestration consists of 6/6 wood-sash windows set in narrow, square-edge wood surrounds. Basement windows along the north elevation have been covered with plywood. The easternmost opening on the second story of the south (side) elevation is slightly smaller. The southwestern elbow of the ell and main block features a one-story porch. Set on a solid parged foundation, this wood-frame porch has been enclosed with aluminum siding and ribbons of 1/1 vinyl-sash windows. A shed roof of asphalt shingles caps the porch. Sheltered by the porch is a single-leaf, paneled wood door with lights flanked by 6/6 wood-sash windows. The west (rear) elevation of the ell has a window opening in the southern bay of the second story. The remaining elevation is obscured by a two-story, one-bay addition and a one-story addition which wraps the second-story addition.

Based on its form and materials, it appears the two-story addition was constructed in the first quarter of the twentieth century. Clad in aluminum siding, the addition is capped by a front-gable roof with the same overhanging eaves and cornice returns featured on the main block and ell, thus suggesting that all of the rooflines have been altered. Fenestration consists of 6/6 wood-sash windows set in narrow, square-edge wood surrounds. The first-story window on the north (side) is small.

The one-story addition that wraps around the two-story addition and obscures the southern rear bay of the ell appears to have been constructed circa 1930. Set on a solid parged foundation, this wood-frame addition has been reclad in aluminum siding. The hipped roof of asphalt shingles has narrow overhanging eaves. A single-leaf, paneled wood door with four lights is located on the south (side) elevation and accessed via concrete steps. A single-light transom completes the opening. Resembling sidelights, narrow 1/1 vinyl-sash windows flank the door opening. Paired 2/2 wood-sash windows in the southwest corner of the south elevation is part of a fish-eye corner window; the western sash having been covered with plywood from the exterior. Additional fenestration consists of a 6/6 wood-sash window and a four-light wood casement located in the northern end of the west (rear) elevation.

INTEGRITY

The Edgar W. Grimes House maintains a moderate degree of integrity of design, materials, and workmanship despite being reclad in aluminum siding, which is a reversible alteration. Furthermore, the horizontality of the original cladding material is maintained by the aluminum siding. All of the original wood windows on the first and second stories are extant. The rear additions have achieved historic significance in their own right based on their early-twentieth century date of construction. Their size and form are subservient to the larger main block and rear ell. Located along Old Branch Avenue, an arterial route in Prince George's County, this dwelling retains integrity of setting, location, feeling, and association.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Edgar W. Grimes House, constructed c. 1900, is located at 6015 Old Branch Avenue in Temple Hills near the unincorporated community of Camp Springs, Maryland. Edgar W. Grimes, a blacksmith owned the property from 1896 until 1911 before conveying the property to Guy H. Trueman. A grocer and real estate speculator, Trueman and his wife Cora R. Trueman (nee Grimes) contributed to the suburbanization of the Camp Springs area with the platting of "Trueman Heights" in 1953. The property stayed in the Trueman family until 2004. At that time, Guy H. Trueman, Jr., conveyed the property to Apex Heap, L.L.C., the current owner. The vernacular dwelling is representative of many of the original structures built during the early-twentieth-century along the burgeoning Old Branch Avenue suburban corridor. The Edgar W. Grimes House is an example of a domestic building type constructed in rural Prince George's County in the early 1900s exhibiting influences of popular suburban forms and styles. The building retains sufficient integrity to illustrate its original construction techniques, stylistic influences, and its significance as a single-family vernacular dwelling constructed at the beginning of the twentieth century in a section of Prince George's County transforming from rural to suburban.

HISTORIC CONTEXT

The Edgar W. Grimes House is located in Temple Hills and is near Camp Springs, Maryland. Camp Springs was originally established in the mid-nineteenth century at the intersection of present-day Branch Avenue (MD 5) and Allentown Road. Camp Springs is located adjacent to and west of Joint Base Andrews Naval Air Facility. Today Camp Springs is roughly bounded by the Capital Beltway (I-495) on the north, Henson Creek and Cherryfield Road on the west, Kirby Road on the south, Joint Base Andrews Naval Air Facility on the east, and Wesson Drive on the northeast.

Early maps of the area note that it was originally called "Allentown," in honor of the Allen family, who were large landholders in the community. Martenet's map of 1861 documents a settlement at the crossroads of present-day Branch Avenue and Allentown Road. The small community comprised several houses, a Methodist Church, school house, a blacksmith shop, and several stores.¹ By 1878, as documented by the Hopkins map, the growing community was also known as Camp Spring. The Hopkins map denotes the Camp Spring post office, Methodist Church, blacksmith shop, and many residences, the majority of which were constructed between 1861 and 1878.² According to local legend, the community was named Camp Springs by the soldiers fighting in the Civil War who traveled through the area and set up camp near the abundant natural springs.³

The community experienced remarkably slow growth throughout the late nineteenth century and into the twentieth century. Widespread subdivision of rural agricultural land in the area did not begin until 1936 with the creation of the T.B. Middleton Farm subdivision. This residential subdivision was created from Manchester Farm, a late-nineteenth-century farmstead.⁴ The first buildings constructed in the subdivision were modest Craftsman-style bungalows located along Old Branch Avenue and Middleton Lane.

Camp Springs remained a small, quiet, and rural community until World War II (1941-1945), when the need for housing and government facilities prompted development. In August 1942, President Franklin D. Roosevelt ordered the construction of a military airfield. The Camp Springs Army Airfield opened in May 1943. The Airfield was renamed Andrews Field in 1945 and in 1947, the name was changed to Andrews Air Force Base (now known as Joint Base Andrews Naval Air Facility).⁵ The opening of the military base encouraged steady growth in Camp Springs, albeit for a limited period. The majority of the twentieth-century development was located northwest of the intersection of Old Branch Avenue and Allentown Road, surrounding the earlier Middleton Farm subdivision.

The property that the Edgar W. Grimes House is located on was once owned by the Sinclairs. In 1896, J.F. Sinclair and his wife, R.S.V. Sinclair, conveyed ½ acre of the current property to Edgar W. Grimes.⁶ Grimes increased his land holdings in 1901 with the acquisition of an additional one acre from the Sinclairs.⁷ Based on the dwellings size, materials, and form, it is likely Grimes constructed the building sometime between these two transactions.

Edgar W. Grimes was born about 1863 to Jeremiah Alfred Grimes and Elizabeth Barrett. At 17-years of age, Grimes was working as a blacksmith in the Oxon Hill area of Prince George's County. A bachelor, Grimes was a roomer in the home of Willi E. Gardner, also a blacksmith. The Gardners also rented a room to T.F. Reantel, a 21-year old wheelwright. Grimes, a blacksmith, married Mary Swann in 1892 and had three children, Frank Louis, Benjamin, and Inez.⁸ Mary passed away in 1905. By the time of the 1910 U.S. Federal Census, Grimes had remarried. His new wife, Clara Virginia Hill, was the daughter of Edward Hill and Frances Club and was born in 1884.⁹ Edgar and Clara married in 1905 and had two daughters at the time of the 1910 census, Sally Viola and Bessie Virginia Grimes. At this time, Grimes owned his own blacksmith shop.¹⁰

In 1911, the Grimes' conveyed the property to Guy H. Trueman.¹¹ Trueman and his wife, Cora R. Trueman (nee Grimes) are associated with the Mayhew-Barbaro House (PG: 76B-070), also in Camp Springs. Edgar, Mary, and Clara are all buried in Camp Springs at the Bells United Methodist Church Cemetery.

Guy H. Trueman was born August 16, 1885 in the Nottingham District of Maryland and was the son of Henry T. Trueman, a farmer, and Florence E. Trueman.¹² He married Cora R. Grimes, also of Maryland, around 1910. Grimes, born in 1887, was the daughter of Henry W. Grimes, a farmer in Brandywine, and his wife, Sarah M. Grimes.¹³ Trueman was employed as a retail merchant in the grocery business and in 1920 was the proprietor of his own general store.¹⁴ By 1930, the Truemans were living in Silver Hill and had four daughters, Katherine A., Evelyn R., Gladys H., and Sara, and a son, Guy Jr. Katherine, the couple's eldest daughter, worked at a dairy farm as a stenographer.¹⁵ In 1933, Trueman was appointed a Trueman, acting on the burgeoning population figures of the Washington metro area and the expanded highway system, subdivided a large portion of his land holdings in the 1950s. Located west and southwest of the Edgar W. Grimes House, this subdivision was known as Trueman Heights. Platted in 1953, the subdivision did not sell well at first. In fact, construction on a wide scale did not come to Trueman Heights until the late 1960s. The earliest found advertisements for the neighborhood appear in 1963. A listing for the dwelling at 5805 Hartwell Street boasted of the "new brick ramblers" with three or four bedrooms, 2.5 baths, multiple fireplaces, modern kitchens, air conditioning, full basements, and plastered walls.¹⁷ Information related to the dwelling or its occupants during the majority of the last half of the twentieth century could not be located.

In 1993, the Trueman daughters conveyed 6015 Old Branch Avenue (then known as Lot #32 in the Trueman Heights Subdivision) to their younger brother.¹⁸ Information related to Guy H. Trueman, Jr. could not be located. In February 2004, Guy H. Trueman, Jr. conveyed the property to Apex Heap, L.L.C. This company currently rents the dwelling, along with multiple other dwellings along Old Branch Avenue previously owned by the Truemans.¹⁹
