Poplar Hill School
19104 Croom Road, Aquasco, Md.
Priv/Occ/Social/Good

1936

The Poplar Hill School is a small, one-story gable-roofed frame building, three bays wide, with entrance into the third bay of the west facade. There is an exterior brick chimney at the north gable end. At the time of the Bi-County survey of 1974, this school-house had already been renovated and re-sided with aluminum. The windows, 6/6 at that time, have since been replaced with shorter, wider modern windows, and the siding has been replaced to accommodate them.

The first school at Poplar Hill was built in 1878, on land (across Croom Road from the present school) deeded to the Board of School Commissioners by freedman J. Allen Hawkins. It was called the Black Swamp School, and as the second "colored" school in Aquasco District, it served the local Black community for nearly sixty years. In 1935, the Board of Education heard a request from the Black community for a new school, and the present school building was finished in 1936. This new Poplar Hill School continued in use until it was closed in 1952; it was purchased by Prince George Lodge #1003 of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. This group has renovated the building and continues to use it as a social center. Its site, with that of the original Black Swamp School, is significant because it has been for more than a century an important step in the progress of Black education.

Prepare both a summary paragraph of significance and a general statement of history and support.

The first school at Poplar Hill, on the road from Woodville to Magruders Ferry, was built in 1877/1878 on land which was sold to the Board of School Commissioners by J. Allen Hawkins. Hawkins was a freedman and former slave of John L. Turner. After Emancipation, he worked as a farm hand, and by 1868 was able to pay $150 to Dr. Mathias Latimer for a 5 1/2 acre parcel of Latimer's "Cole Brook" plantation. Hawkins worked his new farm with his wife Charity, and their growing family, and in 1877, had one acre of his small farm surveyed and laid off for the site of a school for Black children. In June of 1877, the Board of School Commissioners ordered that the contract for building the school was to be advertised, and in August the Board received Hawkins' deed to the one-acre school lot. The deed specifically granted the school children use of Hawkins' spring, and J. Allen Hawkins served for many years as Trustee of the school.

The small one-room school which was built there circa 1878 was known as Black Swamp School, from its location near Black Swamp Creek. This little school house, "Colored" School #2 in the Aquasco District, served to educate the local Black children for nearly sixty years. In February of 1935, however, the Board of Education (successor to the Board of School Commissioners) entertained a request from the Black community near Poplar Hill for a new school building. A year later, the Board purchased from Ann R. Latimer, daughter of Dr. Mathias, another acre of land across the road (on the south side) from the old Black Swamp School. The new and larger school was finished within the year, and came to be known as Poplar Hill School. The old Black Swamp School was purchased and enlarged into a private residence.

Hill

Even the new Poplar/School was very small, considering that it was built as late as 1936, and it has not been discovered just why such a small building was erected. (Cf. the much larger Woodsville School #87B-34, built in 1834 at at the end of the Rosenwald Fund era.) In any case, Poplar Hill School was closed in 1952, and sold to the Price of Prince George Lodge #1003 of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks; this group has renovated the building, and continues to use it as a social center.

This building appears to have been a one-room, rural schoolhouse-that has since been remodeled into a private home. It has a three-bay main (south) facade, with the doorway in the east end-bay. The other openings here are two, centrally-placed, 6/6 windows. A newer brick flue sits on the exterior west wall. Clapboard and aluminum siding, and asphalt-shingle roof.
