Building Date c. 1857

Building Name Connick's Folly and Cemetery

Location Rt. 381, Brandywine (vicinity) , 18803 Aquasco Road

Open to Public: Yes No

Occupied: Yes No

Use Private Residence

Connick's Folly, constructed in c.1857 by Clement R. Connick, is situated 450 feet west of Route 381 and faces southeast. This two-story, 5 bay by 2 bay brick dwelling, laid in American common bond, with a gable roof reflects the earlier Georgian/Federal style of architecture. It has a central entrance with a transom and is flanked by sidelights. Distinguishing architectural features include a dentilled brick cornice and double brick chimneys set flush at each gable end. A one-story brick kitchen with a connecting passage-way (of recent construction, yet similar to the original) abuts the southwest gable end of the main block. The kitchen and passage have gable roofs and an interior brick chimney is set flush at the southwest gable end of the kitchen.

Connick's Folly has been extensively renovated over the past decade, however, its basic original configuration and impressive setting have been retained. The house was mentioned in Forman's, 1934 Early Manor and Plantation Houses of Maryland for its ornamental brick cornice. Of special significance is the family cemetery located on the property, enclosed by a decorative cast-iron fence.

87A-9 Connick's Folly

Connick's Folly, constructed in c.1857, is situated 450 feet west of Route 381 and faces southeast. This two-story, 5 bay by 2 bay brick dwelling, laid in American common bond, with a gable roof reflects the earlier Georgian/Federal style of architecture. It has a central entrance with a transom and is flanked by sidelights. Distinguishing architectural features include a dentilled brick cornice and double brick chimneys set flush at each gable end. A one-story brick kitchen with a connecting passage-way (of recent construction, yet similar to the original) abuts the southwest gable end of the main block. The kitchen and passage have gable roofs and an interior brick chimney is set flush at the southwest gable end of the kitchen.

Over the last decade, Connick's Folly has undergone interior and exterior renovation. The most significant changes include: the reconstruction of the kitchen and connecting passage-way and the removal of much of the original interior (i.e., plaster walls, partition wall framing, door jambs and lintels door and window surrounds, mantels, moldings, and the 6/6 sash windows). However, the present owners have been sensitive to the original character of the house. Window openings have not been altered and mullions will be added to the 1/1 sash thermal panes to give the windows the appearance of having the original 6/6 sashes. They have retained the original floors, staircase, some doors and at least one of the mantels.

All outbuildings, except for one frame shed, have been removed. A barn on the property has recently been resided.

Of special note is the family cemetery located on the property, ^{South}~~North~~ west of the house. An ornamental cast iron fence surrounds the graves of Clement R. Connick (born: October 30, 1798; died: November 18, 1861, and Sophia Connick (his wife; born: October 22, 1802; died: August 6, 1887), for whom the house was built.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Connick's Folly has been extensively renovated over the past decade, however, its basic original configuration and impressive setting have been retained. The house was mentioned in Forman's, 1934 Early Manor and Plant Houses of Maryland for its ornamental brick cornice.¹ Of special significance is the family cemetery located on the property, enclosed by a decorative cast-iron fence.

Connick's Folly was constructed in c.1857 by Clement R. Connick.² Clement, born in 1798, was a son of William Connick, a German immigrant who settled in Prince George's County in the late eighteenth century.³ In 1853, Clement obtained the land on which Connick's Folly was built in a deed from his siblings. This tract was left to Clement and his siblings by Daniel Connick, a brother.⁴ Clement died in 1861, having only lived in Connick's Folly for four years. It passed to his wife, Sophia, who lived there for 30 years.⁵ Upon her death, in 1887, Connick's Folly became the property of Robert Connick, the only son of Clement and Sophia.⁶ It was passed on to his son, William R. C. Connick, at his death in 1911 or 1912. Upon William R.C's death in 1960, it passed to his son, Robert Wyatt Connick and daughter, Edna M. Wilson.⁷ In 1970, Edna Wilson conveyed 2.1475 acres and the house to John and Carol Flewelling.⁸

Forman compares the two cornice treatments, but on closer scrutiny, the cornice of Gwynn Park is composed of molded brick, whereas the cornice of Connick's Folly is dentilled.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (If known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE
The house is a two-story, brick structure laid up in common bond throughout. The main (east) facade is five bays. At either end are two flush gable chimneys. On the south end, there is a one-story kitchen wing with an off-center flush gable chimney on the south end; the wing is connected to the house by an open passage (now a screened porch) with two rooms along the north side. The main house has a central doorway and flanking windows, the openings being carried by jack arches one stretcher in height. The doorway has transom and side lights; the frame has been removed during restoration but will be reinstalled. The windows on both floors, 6/6 double-hung sash, are replacements similar to the original glazing. The cornice consists of three courses of bricks; the lowest is a projecting course of stretchers, the middle a course of headers set in a dentil pattern, and the top a course of stretchers. A one-story porch that once extended across the central three bays has been removed; it had been added in the late nineteenth or early twentieth century. The rear facade is identical to the east facade except for the doorway, which has no lights. The end walls have windows set between the double end chimneys (the south wall has a doorway instead on the ground floor.) The wing once had a two-bay east facade, but the doorway has been enclosed with brick patchwork. The windows, narrow 4/4 double-hung sash, are replacements similar to the original windows. In the gable end, windows flank the fireplace on the ground floor and are east of the chimney in the loft. The north wall of the wing appears to have been an exterior wall. The passage was added after the kitchen was completed, since the kitchen and passage are not bonded together. The north room of the passage has a framed east wall, of beaded boards; it leads to the cellar steps that are exterior to the main house. In plan, the house has a central hall and flanking double rooms. The southwest room, behind the staircase, does not open into the hall but into the southeast room. The two north rooms open into the hall. Each of the rooms has a fireplace projecting into the room. The staircase rises along the south wall of the hall to a landing; the

A narrow staircase in the hall leads to the attic. The roof is framed with common rafters, half-lapped and nailed at the ridge. Collars are half-lapped and nailed over the rafters. The lower rafter ends are bird-mouthed over the plate, which in turn rests on a square notch cut out of the ends of the attic floor joists. The members are all sawn, with some hewn work to shape them. The kitchen is a single room with a large fireplace at the south end. The staircase to the loft is boxed and rises along the north wall. The mantles and woodwork are simple in detail, with narrow surrounds and frames of a fascia with molding along the inner edge. Mantle shelves are relatively narrow and of simple design. The stair rail is oval, with small posts and rectangular ballusters. The house is presently being restored. The owners have had to patch brickwork; replace plaster; remove and repair mantles and floors; replace or add plumbing, heat, and electricity; and rebuild the south wall of the kitchen. The work is being done with attention to detail and reusing the original fixtures; a photograph of about 1900 (showing the house without a porch or a passage between house and kitchen) is being used as a guide.

Mr. Paul Summers, Jr.
"Mt. Airy"
Davidsonville, Maryland 21035

Dear Paul,

A Mrs. Goblirsch of Cheverly inquired about a Federal period house near Aquasco, Maryland, called Connick's Folly, built by a Connick c. 1790-1810, and still owned by a Mrs. W.R.C. Connick.

Mrs. Goblirsch states she has been watching property for one year. Her inquiry: is it for sale or what do we know about it?

Our surveyors reported that the house is vacant and deteriorating rapidly. Mrs. Connick is tied up in some family court problem. She doesn't want to sell it or restore it.

If you would like to contact Mrs. Goblirsch and she is willing for you to investigate a possible purchase, I herewith send you this referral.

Keep me posted. Is she able to restore it or will she ruin it?

For your information: orange color brick; double chimneys at each end; just south of Orme School on Route 382, south side of road, on the road.

Sincerely,

Orlando Ridout IV
Director
