PUSEY FARM DESCRIPTION

The Norman Pusey farm is situated on the north side of the West Post Office Road approximately five miles east of Princess Anne, Somerset County Maryland. The farmhouse faces south with the principal gable oriented on an east/west axis.

The two-story, three-bay house, erected c. 1860, is supported by a minimal brick foundation and is sheathed with a layer of aluminum siding. The medium pitched asphalt shingle roof has a boxed cornice and flush gable ends. A story-and-a-half kitchen wing extends to the rear (north).

The three-bay south elevation is a symmetrical facade with a center door and flanking six over six sash windows. A hip roofed porch, supported by chamfered posts, covers the entrance bay. The front door is a modern replacement. Lighting the second floor are three evenly spaced six over six sash windows.

The gable ends have exterior common bond (seven-course) brick chimney with corbelled bases. The east end has single six over sash window on each floor, and both ends have two over two attic lights.

The north (rear) side is partially covered by the story-and-a-half kitchen wing. The east side of the kitchen has a center door and flanking six over six sash windows. A shed roofed porch covers the first floor of the kitchen, and a simple boxed cornice finishes the eave.

The north end of the kitchen has an exterior stove stack and two over four loft windows. The rear corner of the house has a two-story in-fill.

Standing a short distance northwest of the house is late nineteenth-century frame barn sheathed with weatherboard siding and covered by a medium pitched roof. A shed addition covers the north side of the barn. A large door opening is centered on the east wall, and smaller door opening pierces the upper wall surface.
