LOVE AND CHARITY SOCIETY HALL
Abell
Private

1890's

The Love and Charity Society was a beneficial society founded by Luke Clark, members of the Jameson family and other local Negro Episcopalians in 1884. They first met in a small log house, and in the early 1890's built this handsome hall with lovely gingerbread finishings. The grounds were used for outdoor festivities, the principal one being the annual celebration of Emancipation Day. For over fifty years Clem Dyson has been President of the Society. The Abell School is located nearby on land which the club members helped to purchase.

 DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This long handsome building runs parallel to Abell Rd. (east-west). It consists of two back to back blocks, the east one being the social hall with its entranceway in its gable end, and the rear block (west) being the residence of the caretaker. Both are one story.

The social hall is four long bays in length. Its facade is five narrow bays in width; two doors with three windows between them. The facade is sheltered by a shed porch supported by unturned posts. The structural skeleton is balloon frame, and the cladding is painted gray. The most distinctive feature of the building are the decorative fixtures on the facade. The verge boards along the eaves have been cut into delicate patterns and are capped by a decorative filial at the peak. In the center of the gable wall is a small, circular window, all of these features having been painted in a fresh coat of white paint, giving a sharp appearance to the building.

The floor plan is of an aisled hall with a large seating area and stage. The aisles have brackets and scrollwork.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

According to local oral informants -- Clem Dyson, Bernice Clark Sherman, and Dickerson Collins -- this building once served as the gathering place for members of the Love and Charity Social Club, a group formed by Negro members of the Episcopal Church. That group was headed by Luke Clark, the Negro waterman and farmer in Abell whose house has been recorded in this survey. According to informants, theatrical productions and other forms of tentertainment were put on there before the days of radio and television. The fine work that went into designing the interior gives evidence of the importance that the community gave to such activities.

According to oral informants, the most important occasion was the celebration of Emancipation Day. The community gathered at the home of Luke Clark att about a mile from the Social Club Hall and marched in procession to this site, with Luke Clark leading the parade and wearing a long sword, perhaps a trophy from the Civil War. A barbecue and dance was then held here for the rest of the day.

The principal significance of this building is that it represents the social life of the historical black community.
